New York to Los Angeles
Sky Above the Corn
Senator Capper's Mirror
The Mystic White Cloak

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1921.

On the train going from New York to Los Angeles, at this moment, the corn is so high outside the car window that you see only the sky over the top of the corn. It is necessary to study the country in the newspapers, the mirrors of civilization. A good mirror is the Topeka Daily Capital, owned and edited by Senator Arthur Capper.

The Capital tells you that the railroads by extortionate freight rates take for their share one-half of the ordinary cattle. A farmer ships four steers of ordinary grade; at the end of the journey two belong to him, two belong to the railroad. That is more than the ancient bandit barons, controlling the highways in medieval Europe, used to take from travelers. It was etiquette with them to leave something for the next baron bandit, farther on. Railroads are less squeamish.

The Ku Klux Klan is moving into Kansas. Shrines of the "Mystic White Cloak" are established here and there, sometimes secretly, and taken seriously. You have seen older children turn over the rocking chairs, cover them with a table cloth, crawl underneath and have a mysterious club. The younger children are very much impressed. So with the Ku Klux Klan.

Senator Capper prints on his front page a letter from the Ku Klux, threatening him and his paper for misrepresenting the glorious "White Cloak."

The Ku Kluxer writes to the Senator: "What protection has your daughter or mine, our greatest and most precious jewel?" It turns out that the Ku Klux Klan means to frighten off the I. W. W., the Non-Partisan League and everything that is not "100 per cent. American"—in addition to protecting the "precious jewel."

The Senator's editorial page, as the "Thought for Today," offers this: "The very best asset that any man can have is a good wife." Also this thought: "When hope and love have gone from your life you're dead. It does not make any difference whether they have buried you or not."

Whirling rapidly from the grave to gay, the Senator's paper endeavors to animate the young men of the corn field with this: "When a pretty girl pins a flower on a young man's coat, she always tilts her chin up and looks at it sidewise. The fellow who doesn't tumble had better stay indoors when a funeral procession is passing for fear the hearse will run over him."

Advertising pays in Kansas, as everywhere. Senator Capper quotes the Goodland Republic that tells of a poor homeless dog. Someone, kind-hearted, pinned an advertisement to the dog's collar reading, "Wanted, a Home," and immediately the dog was adopted.

You do not see in Kansas men with tooth brush mustaches and Masonic charms that you met in "Main Street." You see earnest men at the railroad stations worrying about the growing love of luxury, and the habits imported from royal courts of Europe. The Topeka Taxi Company has four closed cars, Ford sedans, lined up at the station, and every one of the drivers wears the following uniform: Heavy pigskin leather leggins, dark blue breeches, light blue shirt, with sleeves rolled up, no coat or waistcoat, no hat. That looks like the entering wedge of effeteness.

In Kansas, original prohibition State, as in Maine, King Alcohol dies as slowly as the head of a snapping turtle after you cut its head off. A special dispatch to Senator Capper's paper from Manhattan, Kan., tells of an anxious farmer taking a valuable hunting dog to the veterinary. "Your dog is poisoned," the veterinary told the lamenting farmer, "and the only thing to save him would be to force a pint of whiskey down his throat."

"Well," replied the farmer, "if I could get a pint of whiskey I'd let the dog die."

In Senator Capper's paper the really important news that human beings ought to be interested in is on the front page. The editorials discuss matters that really interest readers, war, robbery of the government, the possibility of preventing robbery, etc.

Inside the newspaper you find collections of thoughts and facts under headlines that tell of a serious reading public. These are some of the headings: Kansas Grass Roots. Try This on Your Wise Friend. I've Been Reading. Local Chuckles. Thus Spake the Sages.

Each self-respecting Kansas and Missouri city in its newspapers tells each day "what happened in this city forty years ago." Those towns in which nothing happened forty years ago, because the towns hadn't started, seek to conceal youth with euphemism.

Out here, where they feed and govern you and form the public opinion that rules without much

RICH MAN'S NEGLECT OF WIFE SCORED

Accused at Almony Hearing of Casting Her Aside for Younger Woman

New York, July 27.—Attorneys for Philip M. Shaw, head of the banking firm of Philip Shaw & Co. of No. 15 William street, sat in Justice Martin's part of the Supreme oCurt today and heard their banker client denounced as "a modern Bluebeard" who has taken "advantage of technicalities in a legal procedure to get rid of his wife." Mrs. Eleanor Jordan Shaw, whom he married nineteen years ago.

They heard him depicted as a man who has been spending an average of "at least" $40,000 annually for years and now refusing to contribute a cent toward his wife's support. They heard him denounced for "casting aside his wife for a younger woman," and even held accountable for reports that a denial of the legality of his marriage would be made a part of his defense to his wife's divorce suit charges.

ASKS ALLOWANCE.

On the other hand, Mrs. Shaw was pictured as a woman rendered "absolutely destitute" by her husband's negligence, so much so in fact that she has been forced to pawn her jewels and other valuables to obtain the means of existence. She has been dispossessed from her apartment on the west side and is in "actual need" from day to day, the court was further informed.

The argument came up on an application for alimony and counsel fees.

Benjamin F. Spellman, as attorney for Mrs. Shaw, asked for $1,000 a month alimony, $7,500 in counsel fees and $3,000 to meet expenses in gathering evidence for the divorce suit. After listening to arguments from both sides, Justice Martin announced that he would hand down his decision on the application on either next Saturday or Monday.

An important point was won by the plaintiff in the proceedings, when Hugh M. Hewson, counsel for the banker, announced in open court that the denial of the marriage of the couple had been withdrawn and that the legality of the marriage would not be attacked.

REFUSES COMPROMISE.

Mr. Spellman in his argument was ve rybitter in his denunciation of the banker. He told the court that Shaw had made no remittance to his wife since March and that she had become "absolutely destitute."

He dwelt on the lavish expenditures which he declared the banker had made for years and made much of the declaration that his client had been used to ample funds, spending at least $2,000 a month and maintaining an automobile and other luxuries.

Justice Martin suggested that the banker might be willing to contribute a sum toward the maintenance of his wife pending further progress in the action, but Lawyer Hewson declared that in view of the "scandous charges" made against him (Shaw) that "not one cent would be given in charity."

BODY OF WOMAN IS FOUND IN BATH TUB

Peculiar circumstances surround the death of Mrs. Orpa B. Gordon, thirty-seven years old, whose body was found in the bathtub of her home, No. 4 Lorraine terrace, Allston, today.

The woman's body was discovered by her son, Samuel, Jr., five years old. Finding his mother missing from her bed when he awoke, the lad called her repeatedly and, receiving no answer, went into the bathroom, where he found her.

Dr. F. A. Hamilton, summoned when other occupants of the apartment house heard the boy's cries, refused to tell the cause of the woman's death. The Brighton police and Medical Examiner McGrath were notified by him, and they at once began delving into the mystery.

The woman's husband, Samuel Gordon, a salesman, who had been in New York on business, returned this forenoon.

TRANSFER LIGGETT ASSETS

Trustees Named to Protect Creditors of United Drug Company Head

Louis K. Liggett, president of the United Drug Company, former president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and reputed millionaire, today placed his assets in the hands of trustees.

This action was taken, according to a statement issued by Frederic C. Snow, of the law firm of Gaston, Snow, Saltonstall & Hunt, because of the decline in the market value of the United Drug Company common stock in the past twenty-four hours.

The stock has dropped approximately 30 points this week, going down about 20 points today, when it sold at a record low price for both common and preferred.

TO PROTECT CREDITORS.

According to Mr. Snow's statement, the transfer of Mr. Liggett's assets was made for the protection of his creditors, the trustees being Frederic C. Dumaine, Frank W. Remick and Neal Rantoul. Only the personal affairs of Mr. Liggett were said to be involved.

A little more than a year ago Mr. Liggett shattered all records for large incorporations in Massachusetts when the Liggett's International Inc., Ltd., was granted a charter. It showed capitalization of $50,000,000 and was due to the acquisition of the Boots Pure Drug Company, Ltd., of London, by the United Drug Company. The incorporators, beside Mr. Liggett, were John N. Staples, Jr., of Brookline and John C. Grace of Dedham.

BIG BALANCE SHOWN.

According to financial experts, the perpendicular drop in United Drug Common to 54, off 20 1-4 from the previous close of 29 1-4, in two days, was due to the expectation that when the directors met for dividend action next month the dividend of $8 per annum would at least be cut in two, or perhaps passed entirely. Poor earnings in the past few months were said to be the cause. The common stock was placed on an $8 per anum basis in the last quarter of 1920 and continued at that rate up to the last declaraion, which was paid on July 1.

A local financial publication said of the situation:

"Officials of United Drug and the IRISH REPLY EXPECTED FRIDAY

First Ten Days of August Considered Most Likely Time for Peace Parley

By International News Service.

London, July 27.—With the Sinn Fein chieftains conferring among themselves in secret at Dublin, the opinion was advanced in semi-official circles today that Premier Lloyd George will not receive a formal reply to his peace offer from Eamon de Valera until Friday.

It will then be necessary to communicate with the Unionist government at Belfast.

If conditions are such that a general Irish peace parley can be held in London, it probably will open during the first ten days of August. De Valera, Arthur Griffith, Michael Collins and the other members of the Sinn Fein cabinet at Dublin, who have been conferring daily since Sunday, have maintained the utmost secrecy and have given no intimation as to their decision.

TROOPS SAFEGUARDED.

The British government has taken careful precautions to safeguard the lives of crown forces in Ireland if the armistice is suddenly broken off, Austen Chamberlain, spokesman for the British government, announced in the House of Commons this afternoon.

The declaration was made in reply to a question by Lieutenant-Colonel Archer-Shee, a Coalition Unionist.

Lieutenant-Coloner Archer-Shee had expressed fears of a "massacre" of unarmed British soldiers if the truce were suddenly rescinded and they were caught without their arms.

The Coalition Unionist member asked if the government was aware that, when De Valera was arrested some time ago, documents were found upon his person concerning the ambush of British soldiers at Drumcorra.

The member also wished to know if the truce terms provided that notice should be given before the armistice could be terminated. Lieutenant-Colonel Archer-Shee felt that safeguards should be taken in the event the peace negotiations failed.

Mr. Chamberlain said that the gov-

Little East Boston Girl Who Was Pinned Under Trolley Car and Badly Injured

LUCY BUTTS, 6 YEARS OLD.

Pinned beneath a street car for half an hour, while scores of citizens, crews from other cars and members of the city fire and police departments worker franfically to rescue her, little Lucy Butts, six years old, was taken to the East Boston Relief Hospital with a fractured skull today.

The girl, according to bystanders, had started across the street from her home, at No. 160 Meridian street, when her foot slipped on a rail and she fell in the path of an oncoming street car. Unable to throw herself clear of the car, she rolled between the rails and the car passed over her before the motorman could bring it to a stop.

None of the car wheels touched her, although she was severely hurt when her head was struck by the bottom of the car.

Hundreds of passers-by gathered to give what assistance they might. Car traffic was tied up and motormen and conductors ran to help. A fire engine arrived on the scene, as did a squad of police.

DESCRIBES WOBURN REVEL

Declares He Wanted to Press Charges Following Misawum "Circus"

District Attorney Nathan A. Tufts of Middlesex told on the witness stand before Supreme Court today his own story of his actions in connection with the alleged $100,000 hold-up which is said to have followed the Mishawum Manor "Nero Circus."

Attorney-General Allen has made this case his chief weapon in his trial of Tufts on charges of malfeasance.

Tufts today, in a clear, strong voice, denied the slightest wrongdoing in the affair.

He gave a complete history of his actions in connection with it from the time he first learned of the famous revel in March of 1917 to the present day.

District Attorney Tufts intimated that he was in favor of merciless prosecution of the people at the Mishawum Manor affair and would have prosecuted them if conditions had shaped themselves differently.

DENIED HE WOULD "GO EASY."

He said that following the complaint to him he noticed that the two girls who originally told about the "Nero Circus" were weakening in their stories and he got the idea that they had been tampered with.

Tufts told of his first meeting

TUFTS TELLS HIS VERSION OF FAMOUS MISHAWUM MANOR REVEL

DECLARES HE WANTED TO PRESS CASE TO THE LIMIT

with Attorney Daniel H. Coakley in connection with the "Nero Circus."

"He told me that the party had been merely one of some people getting something to eat and drink," said Tufts. "He said there had been nothing wrong."

"But I told him that was not the story I had. I said I learned fifteen girls had been taken there for immoral purposes."

Tufts denied outright that he ever expressed a willingness to "go easy" if the "indignant husbands" in the case were quieted.

He denied that he had made any threat.

Tufts continued that Coakley, at their first interview, asked for time to collect facts.

"I told him there would be no action for some time, anyhow," continued the district attorney.

District Attorney Tufts said that the chief of police of Woburn was the first to tell him of the famous 1917 revel, after the case had been tried in Woburn Court.

The chief of police told of Theresa M. Sears and Bessie McDonald, two of the girls at the affair, and said they had told him of men and girls going upstairs together.

But, continued Tufts, when he came to question the girls for himself, they had changed their stories.

The Sears woman seemed afraid of getting into court again. She wanted the matter dropped. So she did not tell him the same story she had previously told.

Tufts was master of himself throughout his testimony, after his threatened breakdown early in the day. This was when his father's name was mentioned. His father died in 1918, and Tufts' eyes filled with tears, and he could not go on for several minutes.

Thereafter he spoke in a crisp, unhurried, unworried monotone, and answered briefly and forcefully.

Tufts' surrender to emotion came when reference was made to his father, who died in 1918.

FAMILY HISTORY.

His early testimony was regarding his family, his college and law school days, his struggles, his organization of the district attorney's office after he was elected to it in 1917.

One question directed at him was whether he had known William J. Corcoran, his predecessor as district attorney in Middlesex, when they attended Boston University Law School. He answered "slightly."

Judge Hugo A. Dubuque of the Superior Court preceded Tufts on the stand as a witness for the defence, and his appearance caused a sensation.

Judge Dubuque's testimony was highly gratifying to Tufts and his array of counsel.

The judge started off a very important line of testimony by stating that he alone was responsible for disposition of the so-called "Lowell midwife cases."

These cases had been pressed against Tufts as examples of instances in which he was excessively lenient. Attorney-General Allen had devoted a good deal of time to them.

Judge Dubuque said he had never observed any malfeasance or misfeasance in the way Tufts conducted the office of district attorney.

District Attorney Tufts took the stand at 10:25, after a decision by the court regarding the way he was to be cross-examined.

Chief Justice Rugg ruled that in the major cases, such as the Mishawum Manor matter, which the court felt was "the acute case" at present, he should be cross-examined in accordance with the direct examination, but that in the minor cases he might be examined "piece-meal."

Q.—How long have you held the office of district attorney of the Northern District. A.—Since January 3, 1917.

Q.—Where were you born? A.—In Fitchburg.

Q.—When? A.—April 15, 1879.

Q.—Who was your father? A.—Joseph A. Tufts.

SHOWS EMOTION.

Q.—When did he die? Tufts gripped the shelf of the witness stand, glanced downward, tears came to his eyes, his lips twitched, and for several seconds he was unable to reply. He pulled himself together and answered, "June 19, 1918."

Q.—What was your father's employment? A.—He was a ticket-taker on the Fitchburg railroad for a time and worked for the road in various capacities for fifty years. In 1911 he became an invalid and remained so until his death.

Attorney Hurlburt objected to this introduction of family history. Attorney Johnson said it would prove important later on.

Q.—Is your mother still living in Fitchburg? A.—Yes.

SAYS ALLEN ASKED ACTION TO HELP HIS CIVIL SUIT

District Attorney Nathan A. Tufts today testified about the case of John W. Coombs for driving an auto while under the influence of liquor. He said that Attorney-General J. Weston Allen was counsel for the heirs of Patrick O'Dey, the man who was killed in the accident.

"Allen called at my office," said Tufts, "and told me he was anxious for an indictment for manslaughter against Coombs. I told him I had no control over the manslaughter feature.

"Allen replied, 'The only chance I've got to get money is to put this fellow through a course of sprouts in the criminal court.' I told him I could not help him."

Q.—When elected district attorney, who were on your office staff? A.—Frederick W. Fosdick was a deputy in my office until the statute annulled that office. He remained an assistant until he was appointed a justice of the Superior Court in January, 1920. George Stanley Harvey of Malden was an assistant until January of this year, when he resigned. R. H. Boudreau was also an assistant. Frank Grover was another. Samuel Hoar was likewise an assistant.

Q.—Who are your present assistants? A.—Herman A. Wagner of Everett, Mr. Boudreau, Frank Goldman and Mrs. Frances Brady, a member of the bar, recently appointed by special statute.

Q.—How did you first assign the work of your office? A.—As I recall, I gave to Samuel Hoar the domestic relations cases, to Mr. Fosdick the general supervision of larceny and liquor cases and to Mr. Harvey the breaking and entering and allied cases. This division did not hold as the work overlapped.

Q.—When did you first meet Daniel H. Coakley? A.—It was about February, 1917.

Q.—Where? A.—At the Algonquin Club at a dinner to Clerk of Courts Dillingham.

Q.—When was the first time after that you met him? A.—When he came over with some man in regard to the Mishawum case.

260 CASES NOL PROSSED.

Q.—When was Harvey assigned to specific work? A.—When auto cases piled up so fast that no one man could attend to them if he had anything else to do. It was in July, 1919. I turned all auto cases over to him.

Q.—How many cases have you or your assistants caused to be nol prossed? A.—I was unable to get the exact number from the clerk of courts. I think about 200 or 250.

Q.—How many of these case were nol prossed at your own request? A.—Under 200.

Q.—Out of a total of about how many? A.—Between 6,500 or 7,000.

Q.—Do you remember the names of any cases about which you have consulted the courts before nol prossing? A.—Commonwealth versus Bigelow is one I remember distinctly. Special Assistant Attorney-General Hurlburt objected that the prosecution had dropped reference to that case. He was upheld by the court.

SPOKE ABOUT DOCKET.

Q.—Have you had any conversation with the chief justice of the Superior Court relative to relief from the congested condition of your docket? A.—Yes.

Q.—About how many times did you talk with him about it? A.—About twenty-five or thirty times. Every time I saw him.

Q.—How often did you consult him on the overcrowded condition of the docket in connection with bail matters? A.—Three or four times.

Q.—Have you corresponded with him about these matters? A.—Yes.

Attorney Johnson, in order to reply to the charges against Tufts in connection with bondsmen in default cases, asked the defendant to explain what he did to clean up the bail situation in Middlesex County.

"I sent a letter to all the bail commissioners in the county," said Tufts. "I asked them to submit their books to me for examination."

Q.—How many complied? A.—Nine out of twenty-two.

PROBED STRAW BAIL.

Q.—What did you do, then? A.—I had a young woman in my office prepare a list of those who had answered and I sent this list to Chief Justice Aiken. He asked that I submit to him the list of commissioners who failed to comply with my demand for their books so that he might send to them a copy of Common Law Rule 56, governing this matter. I prepared this list.

Q.—Why did you take this action. A.—I wished to find out why so much straw bail was being taken in Middlesex County.

Q.—Did you ever discuss this matter with Chief Justice Aiken? A.—Yes. I told him I thought the bail situation in our county was rotten.

Q.—Did you ever do anything to remedy the situation? A.—Yes. I filed a petition to the Legislature in December and January of last year.

Tufts testified that he was a law partner of George Stanley Harvey and Frank W. Campbell. He said the firm was organized January 1, 1920. He had not been to the offices more than a dozen times. The offices are at No. 215 Barristers Hall. Tufts said he financed the firm at the outset. He never received any emolument from it.

DEFENDED BOYD.

Q.—Did you ever defend Frederick Boyd, who was charged with operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor? A.—I did. (This case related to a charge by Allen that Tufts, while district attorney, appeared as counsel for the defence in a criminal case.)

Q.—Who is Frederick Boyd? A.—He is one of my dearest and closest friends.

Q.—Where does he live? A.—In Brookline in the Winter and at a beach in the Summer.

Q.—What court was that case in? A.—In Boston Municipal Court.

Q.—And was Mr. Boyd found not guilty? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you receive any emolument for appearing? A.—I did not.

Q.—Did you at any other time, with the exception of the Boyd case, since you have been district attorney, appear for or defend any defendant in a criminal action? A.—I have not.

Q.—Have you any personal knowledge that any of your law partners did? A.—No.

Q.—Do you know anything about the John W. Curry case, mentioned in the charges? A.—I never heard of it until I read these charges.

Q.—Do you know anything about the John A. Dondero or the Henry Nielson cases, in the Ponzi matter? A.—I can say the same. I never heard of them until these charges were brought.

Q.—Did you ever have any knowledge of the Florence M. Seale case outside of your county? A.—No.

ATTACK ON ALLEN.

Q.—What did you know about the so-called Lowell midwife cases? A.—I knew nothing about them personally. They were handled by my assistant, Mr. Fosdick. I had nothing to do with them. However, Judge Dubuque heartily approved what had been done when the cases were disposed of.

Attorney Johnson asked Tufts concerning various minor cases in the Allen negotiations. Tufts said he had no knowledge of them as they were handled by assistants.

Tufts said it had been his policy not to try criminal cases in connection with which civil suits were pending, and that he followed this policy as a result of talks with Superior Court judges.

The first testimony bordering on an attack on Attorney-General Allen came in connection with the John W. Coombs case, which figured prominently in the case for the State.

Coombs was arrested in December, 1918, for operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor and colliding with another machine in Newton, upsetting the other car and killing one man and injuring four.

Attorney Johnson showed records of the Superior Civil Court showing that three suits were brought against Coombs by occupants of the other car and that Attorney J. Weston Allen was counsel for the heirs of Patrick O'Day, the man who was killed.

ALLEN WANTED INDICTMENT.

Q.—Tell us about that case. A.—Mr. Allen called at my office and told me he was anxious for an indictment against Coombs. He said he wanted an indictment for manslaughter. I told him I had no control over the manslaughter feature.

"I told him it had been our custom to charge a defendant with operating under the influence of liquor and not to charge manslaughter unless the evidence was very strong. Allen replied, 'The only chance I've got to get money is to put this fellow through a course of sprouts in the criminal court.'

"I told him I could not help him. Later he telephoned. I got a letter. He wanted to know if I could find the car which Coombs drove the night of the accident as he wished to attach it. I told him I would try to locate it, as I was interested in that myself in connection with the criminal case. He asked me to assign one of my deputies to search for the car."

The letters put in showed that at the time referred to Tufts called Allen "My Dear Weston" and Allen was calling him "My Dear Tufts."

LISTENED TO RULING.

One of the letters dated March 13, 1919, showed Tufts replying "My Dear Weston—I am making inquiries about the car driven by Coombs. If I succeed in locating it I shall be glad to let you know."

Several days later Allen replied—"My Dear Tufts—Hope your deputy succeeds in securing information about the Coombs car, in order to aid my client."

Q.—What have you got to say about the prosecution of the Coombs case? A.—Owing to the fact that civil suits had grown out of it it was not as speedily handled as more important cases on the docket were. But it is still pending.

Q.—Was Coombs indicted? A.—Yes. For operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor.

Q.—What became of the manslaughter charge? A.—The Grand Jury returned no bill.

Asked relative to Allen's charge that he was present during the trial of the divorce suit brought by the wife of Harold S. Chambers, indicted for larceny and attempted larceny, Tufts denied that he was in the courtroom in connection with the suit. He said he was passing through and listened to a very interesting ruling.

Q.—During your term as district attorney have you ever taken a single action for your personal gain or for the personal gain of others? A.—Never.

Q.—Do you recall the request from personal friends for official action by you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you recall in May, 1917, a visit by the chief of police of Woburn? A.—Yes.

MANOR RAIDED.

What was said? A.—The chief of police had come from the trial in the lower court. He said it was the aftermath of a bad condition in Woburn that had existed for a long time. He said that two girls who had been refused admission to Mishawum Manor when they apeared there with a couple of chauffeurs had reported to the police the bad conditions at the manor.

The chief of police went on to say that as a result of this information a raid was made on the manor which resulted in the case from which he had just come. He said that in the lower court two women had testified that girls had been procured for the party and had occupied roofs with men.

Q.—Was there any complaint from other people, in addition? A.—From two or three.

Q.—Do you recall Coakley coming with several people? A.—Yes.

Q.—What was said? A.—Coakley told me several people had consulted him in regard to a Mashawum Manor affair. He said that he came to tell me that these people had done nothing more than come to get something to eat and drink. I said: "I had another kind of story about it." I told him what I had heard.

DENIES CHARGE.

"I told him that instead of a drink and a bite that fifteen girls had been procured for immoral purposes. He disputed that and said he had learned differently. He asked me for time to get facts from other people. I told him that there would be no action anyhow for some time.

Q.—Did you ever say that if the complaint was taken off your back you would do differently? A.—No.

Q.—Did you make any threat? A.—No.

Q.—Did you then send for the girls? A.—Yes. I sent for Miss Sears and Miss McDonald.

Q.—What was your conversation with Miss Sears? A.—I asked her for her story of the Mishawum Manor affair. She said, "I don't want to go into court. It wasn't much of a party. There was a crowd out, but I don't know anything about it." I showed her a list of four or five names and asked her if any of those had been there. She mentioned one name which I have forgotten.

Q.—Did she tell you that any people went upstairs together? A.—No.

Q.—What was the conversation with Miss McDonald? A.—Miss McDonald said, "I don't remember much, for I guess I had a little to drink." I asked her if she had not told another story to the Woburn chief of police. She said, "I don't know. I don't want to talk about it." She would give no information.

Q.—Did she tell you about men and girls going upstairs together. A.—No.

Q.—Did you send for the girls again? A.—I did, but they could not be found.

Q.—Did you write to Mr. Coakley about this time? A.—Yes.

Attorney Ranney pointed out that the letter in which he wrote to Mr. Coakley was already in evidence and concerned Tufts' opinion that witnesses had been tampered with.

Q.—Did you see another attorney at this time? A.—Mr. Wright.

Q.—Did you know Mr. Wright as a member of the Goevrnor's council? A.—Yes.

DENIED WRONGDOING.

Q.—What was the conversation? A.—Mr. Wright said, "Concerning this Mishawum Manor affair I know these men didn't do anything wrong. I was myself a member of the party, but left before they went to the manor."

I said that I had been informed that there had been something wrong. Mr. Wright assured me that the men had gone there only to get a drink. That they had danced with the women, but had done nothing wrong with them.

Q.—Did you tell Miss Sears that you would get money that Brownie Kennedy owed her? A.—No.

Q.—Was anything further said in the conversation with Miss Sears? A.—Only that she did not want to go to court and that I told her she would have to if she had any information.

Q.—Who next did you talk with concerning the matter? A.—Mr. Innes.

Q.—What was the conversation? A.—He said, "Has Charlie Wright been out to see you?" I said yes. "How many lawyers are there in this case?" He said that Coakley was out of it. I told him that the chief of police had come out to me and that I had talked to the girls. He said, "I don't know these men, but I do know that there was nothing wrong took place at the party."

SUSPECTED TAMPERING.

Q.—Were summons issued? A.—Yes. I told Mr. Quinn to get all who knew about the case.

Q.—What was your state of mind in regard to Grand Jury proceedings? A.—I felt an effort has been made to tamper with the case. The girls had told a different story to me than what they had testified to in the lower court and later I couldn't find them. So I decided to summons for a Grand Jury as being the only way to get to the bottom of the case.

Q.—Did you see the chief of police of Woburn again? A.—He came as soon as he was summoned.

Q.—What did you say to him? A.—I told him I was anxious to clean up this Mishawum affair, but the girls had gone back on me. I hold him I had not been able to find them, although I was given to understand one of them rad been arrested somewhere.

"I said I did not think we could rely on them to substantiate what they said in Woburn Court. I said they had either perjured themselves there or in statements to me. The chief of police told me he was anxious for the Kingston woman to leave town, as he did not wish to have more scandal.

Q.—Did you feel justified, after what the chief had told you, in putting the case before the Grand Jury? A.—No.

NEVER HEARD OF "BROWNIE."

Q.—Had you ever heard of the Kennedy woman, alias Kingston, before this matter came up? A.—No.

At this point Tufts explained that the Woburn case against "Brownie" Kennedy was disposed of by allowing the fine which was imposed by the lower court and continuing the charge of conducting a house of ill fame. (The fine was one of $100, for keeping liquor for sale. Mrs. Kennedy had been sentenced to six months in jail in the lower court in connection with the house of ill fame complaint.)

Tufts continued that the Kennedy woman defaulted when the case was called in the Superior Court and that a capias was issued, and she appeared next morning.

He said he removed the default and gave the court a brief history of the facts, without making any recommendations or volunteering any. He said that in view of the fact that the place in Woburn had been closed up, and that the Kennedy woman had left town, which was all the chief desired, the case was continued. No action was taken to file it. He said Judge Charles U. Bell presided.

NEVER DISCUSSED FEES.

Q.—Now there has been testimony, Mr. Tufts, about a long string of conferences attended by divers attorneys in connection with this Mishawum affair, and I wish to ask if you attended any of them? A.—I did not.

Q.—Did you ever discuss with Mr. Coakley or anybody else the matter of fees? A.—No.

Q.—Were you kept informed as to the purpose of these conferences? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever suggest or have anything to do with any settlement? A.—No.

Q.—Did Coakley ever tell you a settlement had been made? A.—I have no recollection of it. But if he says he did, it must be so.

Q.—Did Captain Gordon secure a release from Theresa Sears, as alleged? Did you know of it, or were you informed of it? A.—No.

Q.—Did you have any reason to protect Lillian Kennedy alias Kingston? A.—Absolutely not.

Q.—Did you treat her differently than you would have treated any other woman defendant in the same circumstances? A.—No.

MORSE CASE.

Q.—Did Sergeant Presho tell you that Helen A. Morse was the Kennedy woman? A.—He did not.

Q.—What happened in the Morse case? A.—It was our custom to send notices for the officers to come in connection with cases while the dockets were crowded. As I recall it, Sergeant Presho came with one of his officers in connection with the Morse case.

"Sergeant Presho told me he couldn't find the woman to serve notice on her. He asked what to do. I told him to get her and then come to me. He never in any way showed me the papers which he showed here."

Attorney Ranney—He did not say he did.

Q.—Was that what you called defaulted? A.—She had not received notice, as the officer could not find her.

Q.—When did the case come up for disposition? A.—In November, 1918. It was our custom at the end of each term to clean the docket as far as possible. There was no likelihood of locating this woman, and as we came across her case, and as the Cambridge place had been closed, this affidavit was presented to the court. I signed this affidavit. The matter was colsed by Judge Dubuque.

Q.—Does that affidavit accurately state the facts to the best of your beliefs? A.—Yes.

HONEST AS COULD BE.

Q.—How many cases were disposed of that day? A.—I think very few that day.

Q.—Did you intentionally misstate a single word in that affidavit? A.—I did not.

Q.—You were as honest as you could be? A.—I was.

Q.—Did anybody ever tell you that that woman (the Morse woman) was within reach? A.—No.

Chief Justice Rugg—Was the default entered in that case? Was the affidavit for filing the case made after the default? A.—Yes.

The papers were produced and studied by counsel for both sides. Hurlburt announced no record or a default appeared.

Chief Justice Rugg—The court desires to be informed with accuracy. Counsel promised to get the paper docket.

Tufts explained the Grand Jury summons to Charles H. Wright, formerly of the Governor's Council, in the Mishawum case. He said it was a mistake and he so write to Wright.

Tufts said nobody ever told him the Morse woman was living under another name.

After the noon recess Stephen J. Tobin, in the auto delivery business in Cambridge, took the stand.

He testified that Lillian Kingston, alias Kennedy, came to him the morning after her apartment on Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, was raided. She asked him to go her bail. He refused.

Witness said the last time he heard of "Brownie" Kennedy was early one morning when she left for Cuba.

He was taken in cross-examination. He said that "Brownie" Kennedy registered a car at his garage under the name of Mrs. Lillian J. Dale.

TUFTS' PROSECUTOR AS HE LOOKS IN ACTION

ATTORNEY-GENERAL ALLEN

Artist Harmony's impressions of how he looks while leading the State's fight against the Middlesex County official.

Girls Describe Scenes at Mishawum Revel

District Attorney Tufts was requested to leave the stand for a few minutes at his trial today in Supreme Court, and Mary L. Hatch was introduced. She is a court stenographer and testified as to the Mishawum Manor case in the lower court.

She offered a copy of the testimony of Theresa Sears and Bessie McDonald, two of the girls at the "Nero Circus." The testimony was read.

Theresa Sears testified in the lower court that she was a piano player at Mishawum Manor and that on the night of March 6, 1917, there was a party of fifteen girls and sixteen men there. She said several of the men and women occupied rooms together.

Bessie McDonald testified that she was a waitress at Mishawum Manor. She said there was a large banquet on March 6, 1917, attended by Hiram Abrams, Adolph Zukor, Lasky and three girls, Elsie Snow, Ethel Ladd and Helen Baker, among others. She testified that the charge for the banquet was $1,055.

It was supposed to have been paid by Abrams. She said that during the banquet couples left the banquet room and stayed away for half or three-quarters of an hour.

The McDonald woman testified that the last party left the manor early in the morning, about 7 o'clock. She said that the girls were sent for before the party by Mrs. Kennedy (Brownie) and that they were to get $50 for their services.

"I don't think they were paid," she testified. Ordinarily, according to the McDonald woman's testimony in the lower court, men paid Mrs. Kennedy $20 for a girl and $5 for the rooms.

The McDonald woman said she was often sent upstairs to fix up the rooms after they had been occupied.

Miss Hatch was taken in cross-examination. The fact was brought out that she made the transcript of this testimony three weeks ago at the request of Attorney Corcoran.

Judge Dubuque Defends Tufts' Acts

Judge Hugo A. Dubuque of the Superior Court was the first witness for Tufts today.

Q.—Has the court been kept busy for the last two years? A.—Yes.

Q.—Has District Attorney Tufts always conducted himself well? A.—Question excluded.

Q.—Do you remember the Lowell midwife cases? A.—Yes.

Q.—Will you describe the circumstances? A.—Several cases of that nature came up at one time. One case was presented to a jury as a test case. The defendant was found guilty. In passing sentence I considered the fact that our mothers and grandmothers had made little objection to such practice. The defendants were reported to be mothers of families. They were all poor. Accordingly, I suggested that the cases be filed. The filing of these cases stood as a suspended sentence. The defendants gave reasonable expectation of ceasing the practice for which they had been brought before the court. I, myself, was entirely responsible for this decision.

Q.—Do you remember the Florence M. Seale case of June 9, 1919? A.—No, I do not.

USED OWN JUDGMENT.

Q.—Were there any cases where the recommendation by Tufts for a sentence was not followed by you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Were there any cases where you imposed lighter sentences than he wanted? A.—Yes; I used my own judgment.

Q.—In determining the disposition of cases, what other sources of information than the District Attorney did you have? A.—The probation officer and officers connected with jails. But usually the District Attorney or his assistants.

Q.—What, in your judgment as a criminologist, are the elements that enter into the disposition of a case by a district attorney? Question excluded.

Q.—Did you discuss with Tufts at any time the elements that should enter into the disposition of cases? A.—I did.

Q.—Did you ever discuss with him the congested condition of the docket? A.—I did.

Q.—What was that discussion? A.—I told him I though only the more serious cases should be submitted to trial. I said some other disposition should be made of case not so serious.

Q.—Did you observe any misfeasance or malfeasance on the part of Tufts in office? A.—No.

Q.—Did you make any observations as to his diligence in office? Question excluded.

Science Explains Hypnotism

There is a power in the eye that is more amazing than sight. This ray, according to Professor Garrett P. Serviss, is powerful enough to start a machine and explains the "evil eye" of tradition, the effect of the snake's eye upon a bird and other influences. Next Sunday's Advertiser.

NORTHCLIFFE SEES BRITAIN AS ADAMLESS EDEN WITH 2,000,000 EVES

STATUS OF WOMAN IS UNIQUE

New York, July 27.—Lord Northcliffe, famous English publisher, describes the present status of womanhood in Great Britain as "unique."

In a half dozen sentences spoken by the big, thoughtful-eyed man who probably more nearly controls public opinion surrounding him than does any other human being in all the world, Englaand was pictured as an Adamless Eden where two million wistful eyes long to barter freedom for a little golden sand.

He said:

"While their status is a post-war condition, it is not entirely caused by the war. One million men killed off left a like number of unattached women.

BOYS' DEATHS IN EXCESS.

"But more boy babies die than girl babies. And England is a small island; young men are crowded out and go to Canada, Australia—wherever there is more room. They marry where they settle, leaving more women to join the surplus.

"What to do for those two million surplus women is a fascinating problem. Where shall their place be found; what is it to be?

"Yet there is no discontent among them. Hundreds were thrown out of employment with the ending of war activities. But they have found work by going into service. Plenty of places are open to them; you see there were no servants during the war.

"Wages? Of course they are down! But even this has bred no discontent. Our women are a far-seeing and thrifty lot on the whole."

Lord Northcliffe said women are making a success of politics in his country because they interest themselves in branches which most concern family and household.

GIVE SATISFACTORY SERVICE

"English women also give unusually satisfactory service on municipal boards, and as town officials and counsellors. They seem to show no desire to go into Parliament."

Lord Northcliffe said today that he believed there would be a satisfactory settlement on the Irish question, not on a basis of complete independence for Ireland and the establishment of a republic, but with a liberal measure of home rule for the Irish which would mean something more than dominion home rule.

He explained that a satisfactory settlement of the Irish question would take time; that it was not to be accomplished in a day and Americans should not look to see the trouble adjudicated over night.

With a humorous twinkle in his shrewd eyes, he said: "The Irish people are good negotiators; have you ever been at an Irish horse fair?"

"Do you think," he was asked, "that world sentiment would tolerate a disagreement on the Irish question?"

"I do not," he replied.

"Will the people of England be satisfied with any settlement which does not mean peace?"

"No; for the last two years there has been hell in Ireland. The Irish people on both sides and the English people are sick of it. They want peace."

Hartford, Ct., July 27.—Is Jack Dempsey married to Miss Sylvia Jocelyn, the movie star, and are the couple now on their honeymoon in the West? Friends of the couple are reported sponsors for the statement that the question can be answered in the affirmative.

Miss Joselyn formerly lived in this city. Dempsey and Miss Joselyn were recently the guests here of Mrs. Robert J. Allyn of Asylum avenue. At that time it is said the couple planned to be married in the West.

Local friends of Dempsey and Miss Jocelyn declare the couple are now "somewhere in California."

TWO BURNED TO DEATH IN NEW BEDFORD

Man and Wife Lose Lives When Fire Destroys Dwelling

New Bedford, July 17.—Overcome by smoke fumes in an upstairs room of their home, Edmond McCoy and his wife, Abbie, both sixty-two years old were burned to death today when fire destroyed the wooden dwelling in which they were living.

The two had rooms over the Apostolic Faith Mission, No. 284 Kempton street. Firemen, responding to an alarm sent in by neighbors, broke into the house and found the pair lying unconscious in their bedroom on the second floor. Mrs. McCoy was lying across the bed, while McCoy was sprawled on the floor. Both were enveloped in flames.

The bodies when dragged from the blazing room by the firemen were badly burned. The victims were rushed to St. Luke's Hospital, where physicians pronounced them dead.

The fire is believed to have strated in a back hoom on the first floor, used as a store-room by the mission. Firemen were unable to explain its origin.

McCoy was a former sailor, and in the old whaling dayse of New Bedford had been a familiar figure about the docks.

GREENE OUT OF PEOPLE'S TRUST CONTROL

Holds 10,000 Shares of Common Stock, But Has No Office or Voting Power

Henry V. Greene, head of the H. V. Greene Company, Inc., which with the First People's Trust has been charged by the Boston Legal Aid Society with conspiracy, gross mismanagement and fraudulent misrepresentation, is no longer in control of the Trust, it was learned today.

Greene, who organized the Trust, and under an iron-bound contract which prevented him from being removed, became its controlling genius, does not even hold an official position in the organization.

He does retain 10,000 shares of the common stock, but under the declaration of the trust the shareholders have no voting power whatever.

Greene stepped down and out of the control of the Trust, which he had held as vice-president and trustee, shortly after J. Henry Neal, former president of the Boston Elevated, assumed the presidency of the Trust.

MISMANAGEMENT DENIED.

Mr. Neal issued a statement today in which he declared that the Trust was not a subsidary of the H. V. Greene Company, that it was absolutely sound financially, and that there had been no mismanagement nor misrepresentation.

Grene, who from a former Boston drug clerk and bankrupt head of the Old Colony Foundry & Fence Company, jumped into the limelight as a financier dealing in millions, organizde the First People's Trust in 1919. At that time he was but thirty-one years old, but was already obtaining a country-wide reputation as the titulary deity of the H. V. Greene Company.

The trust was fouded on a declaration of trust on October 28, and was capitalized for $30,000,000. There were 200,000 shares 9 per cent. first preferred cumulative stock, par value $50; 200,000 share 5 per cent. cumulative convertible second preferred, par value $50, and $10,000 worth of common stock.

GREENE HAD CONTROL.

The Trust was organized to engage in automobile loans, commercial paper, trade and book acceptances, and the handiwork of Greene was evident in the declaration of trust. He became a vice-president and trustee, with six of his own men also on the board of trustees. Furthermore, the declaration provided that while any of the other trustees might be removed by their fellows, Greene could not be removed with or without cause. As the shareholders had no voting power, and as Greene controlled the majority of the trustees, it is evident that the Trust was conducted in accordance with his wishes.

Then came the attacks on the Greene holdings, heralded by an official examination made by a committee of business men into the affairs of the Commercial Finance Corporation, the Mutual Finance Corporation and the First People's Trust. The report, which was made to Attorney-General Allen, showed that the first two organizations had suffered losses through loans to the now defunct Massachusetts Motors Company. The trust was reported to be sound at that time.

This report was followed by the institution of a number of suits by investors against the Greene Company, several of which made the trust a co-defendant.

THE LATEST CHARGES.

The latest was that brought by Attorney Joseph D. Taylor of the Legal Aid Society, on complaints of investors, in bills in equity. These charged the Greene Company and the Trust with conspiracy, gross mismanagement and fraudulent misrepresentation.

A receiver for the First People's Trust was also sought by Jan Smolicha of Newburyport, and, in all, the Greene organization and its connections are facing thirty legal actions seeking an accounting.

Mr. Greene issued a statement today in which he said that the suits had been filed principally by the Legal Aid Society for people "who have been adversely affected by propaganda against the H. V. Greene Company." He said that he considered these actions hasty and ill-advised, and that there was no necessity, reason or cause for them. He added that it was a simple matter to file a suit or bill in equity, and that the courts would determine the outcome.

MR. NEAL'S STATEMENT.

President Neal of the Trust also issued a statement, in which he said the relations of the Trust with the H. V. Greene Company were simply those of broker to principal.

The Trust, he declared, was not a subsidiary of the Greene Company, which has a contract for the sale of stock upon a commission basis.

President Neal denied charges of mismanagement, explaining that the mortigage on the Journal Building was purchased from the Hanover Trust Company. This deal was carried out, he said, because the condition of the Hanover Trust would not permit the withdrawal of the People's Trust funds, which had been deposited there before Mr. Neal became president. The mortgage was later paid by the Bank Commissioner.

He concluded by stating that there could be no basis for charges of conspiracy and fraudulent misrepresentation, inasmuch as the First People's Trust did not sell its own stock.

NEW BENJAMIN ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED

Miss Ottavia Follows Mrs. Caruso's Example of Making Facts Public Herself

New York, July 27.—Another young woman member of the well known Benjamin family surprised society and her parents today by announcing her engagement much after the fashion of her cousin, Mrs. Enrico Caruso. This announcement was sent to the newspapers:

"Mr. and Mrs. Walter Romeyn Benjamin, of No. 154 West Eighty-Eighth street, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ottavia de Saint Seigne Benjamin, to Mr. Donald Dana Upham, of No. 260 West 76th street."

The announcement was signed by Miss O. Benjamin, Stern Hospital, West End Avenue.

When seen at his home Mr. Benjamin said he had not authorized such an announcement and added:

"I am quite certain that Mrs. Benjamin, who has been absent from the city for two weeks, has not.

"I do not wish it to be understood that I am opposed to my daughter's engagement to Mr. Upham. She is perfectly capable of arranging such affairs for herself, but I am puzzled that she should have inserted such an advertised announcement without my having any knowledge of it and without having consulted me about it."

Miss Benjamin, who is taking a course in nursing at the S. A. R. Stern Hospital at No. 365 West End avenue, could not be reached there. She is a member of a well-known family of this city, being a niece of William Evarts Benjamin and George Hillard Benjamin, and a cousin of Mrs. Enrico Caruso, Mrs. Frederick Worth Goddard and Mrs. Preston Gibson. Miss Celia Benjamin and Park Benjamin are her sister and brother.

Mr. Upham is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Dana Upham of No. 260 West Seventy-Sixth street. He is in Baltimore, where he is connected with the United States Asphalt Refining Company of that city. He served in the army during the war. Miss Rosamond S. Upham is his older sister.

Mrs. Dickerman, part of whose citation from the French government for heroic war work is shown here, defends her marriage at forty with the youthful hero. She says a woman in whose veins red blood flows is young at forty-five. Mrs. Fitz Simons, who was Elsie French Vanderbilt, wed a poor ensign, her son's age, because "she loved him."

Woman Is as Old as Her Enthusiasm, Says Mrs. Robert E. Dickerman

By HAZEL CANNING

An older woman, nowadays, makes a perfectly suitable wife for a man twenty years younger than herself. And another woman, dead in the upper mental regions, may be too old at twenty-five for a man of fifty.

In other words, when measuring fitness for marriage, vitality, enthusiasm, youthful eagerness, are to be considered, not mere years.

"For what is age, and what are years, anyway? A woman is as old as her vitality."

These are some of the points made by Mrs. Robert Elliot Dickerman, clubwoman, war worker cited several times by the French government, architect of note.

COURTED IN FRANCE.

Mrs. Dickerman, as the result of a hectic courtship paid her in France, married young Robert Dickerman of Somerville, formerly of the French army.

Mrs. Dickerman is over forty. Dickerman is about twenty-seven.

Some months after the marriage, young Dickerman left his wife. And her suit against her mother-in-law, Mrs. Frank E. Dickerman, of Somerville, for alienation of the affections of her young husband, followed. That suit will be tried next month.

But on the subject of a man and his wife and their ages, Mrs. Dickerman speaks words of the philosophy of modern woman, and of modern marriage, thought out by herself, in hour of pain and hour of deepest feeling.

HAS MADE CAREER.

As she speaks, in her voice the woman who has made a career in the great world, as well as the woman who wants what the most ordinary woman is said to want—love and home and marriage. As Mrs. Dickerman explains:

"People may have called me unwise, because I married a man years younger than myself. But the matter of our ages was thought out most deliberately. For what is age, anyway? What are years?

"A woman is as young as her vitality. If, at forty-five, she feels and acts and moves as a woman of twenty-five, then she is twenty-five.

"By the inexorable laws of nature, when red blood flows redly, and heart beats with a thrill, when color comes and goes, and enthusiasm is in the mind and heart of the woman—by all these rules, at forty-five, that woman still is twenty.

YOUNG MAY BE OLD.

"Take the woman of twenty. She may be a lazy, sofa clinging, weary eyed, feeble wreck of a woman, and she, at twenty, is to all intents forty-five or fifty.

"Now, there was a day when it was absolutely fitting that men and women should be of equal age, or thereabouts, to make good husbands and wives. That day is past. It went out with the day when woman came into her own.

"In life, again and again, you see the clever girl marrying the man many years her senior, because she admires his brains and his ability. That marriage is founded upon the rock of double safety—love and admiration, mutual tastes.

"Why can't the tables be turned, then? Why can't the young man marry the older woman because he admires her work, her achievements, her record? Why can't such a marriage be also founded upon the double rock of love and work? Oh, time of the changing present—the day will dawn soon when such marriages perfectly well can be!

"Consider again. The older woman, as wife, I know from my own heart, wishes to give to her husband, as well as to take from him. I sent my young husband to school, for nine months while I went to California and worked at my profession.

"I made a home for him in New York, with all my own beautiful things which he loved. I cared not if it was my furniture which furnished the little home. I wanted him to be happy, and I wanted to help him. In true love, sacrifice and devotion play a large part. And the older woman has learned sacrifice and devotion, through years of work and life."

To which Mrs. Fred Dickson, 50-year-old widow of Dennis, Massachusetts, who has married a young husband of 24, just recently, added her assent.

"A woman," said Mrs. Dickson, "can love a man 20 years her senior; then why can't she love a man 20 years her junior? Marriage between an old woman and a young man is not a matter of years, but of mutual attraction.

"Heart calls to heart; bounding love to bounding love, and the old woman takes the young man to her bosom, and years are forgotten. She just wishes to live as I do here, on Cape Cod, alone with love and peace and nature—and Mr. Dickson.

"For youth cannot live with crabbed age, but why need age be crabbed? That was the way I felt when I married my true love, Mr. Dickson, though it is nobody's business but my own. For, surely the union of bold, fearless, loving hearts, though one is 50 and the other 21, is the business of those hearts, and of none other."

To which Mrs. Paul FitzSimons, who, before her marriage, was Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt, added a third "I'll say so." Mrs. FitzSimons married the young and poor ensign, Paul FitzSimons, the age of her son, a year or two ago.

JAILED PASTOR FILES CHARGE OF ASSAULT

Neighbor Retaliates With Accusation That Clergyman Stole His Hay

Greenfield, July 27.—Walter C. Carroll, retired Methodist minister, whose refusal to send his children to school here last Spring, caused him to be sent to jail, has broken into the limelight again. Today he filed a bill of complaint in District Court, charging assault against Fred Rowland, a neighbor. Both men are residents of Leyden, near here.

Rowland declares that when Rev. Mr. Carroll comes into court tomorrow to press his charges he, Rowland, will present a cross-bill against the former pastor, charging larceny. He claims that Rev. Mr. Carroll stole a quantity of hay from him a short time ago.

Rev. Mr. Carroll was jailed in April, after he had refused to pay a $25 fine, levied when he persisted in refusal to send his five children to school. After he had spent a day in the lockup, however, a relative paid his fine and he was released.

The former minister, who is twenty-nine years old, drew considerable attention to himself after his jail sentence, declaring, among other things, that half of the people outside of jail should be inside, and half of those inside should be free. He also said that every person should have the experience of going to jail.

12-DAY "BRIDE" LOST MATE AND $1,100

Chicago Wife of "Bohemian Marriage" Charges Deserting Sweetheart With Larceny

Alleging that both her sweetheart and $1,100 which she had given him for safekeeping had disappeared twelve days after she had entered into a "Bohemian marriage," Miss Frances Demolin of Chicago appeared before Judge Baker in Newton Court today to press a charge of larceny against Ladeslef Cervenka.

Cervenka, according to the girl's story, conducted a courtship by mail. During the course of this courtship, she said, she sent him $1,100 to keep for her until their marriage.

Their "marriage," which, it seems, was conducted without the formality of a license, ended after twelve days, she said, in the disappearance of both Cervenka and the money.

Cervenka was held for the November term of court in $1,000 bail.

Lawn Fete at Newport Today for Orphanage Benefit

By BETTY ALDEN

A generous number of Newport's smartest summering folk patronized the lawn fete this afternoon at "Roslyn," for the benefit of St. Mary's orphanage. "Roslyn" is the magnificent Summer estate of the well-known Mrs. Wilbur K. Wilder of New York, and is one of Newport's showplaces. I note that Mrs. George Peabody Gardner, Jr., of Boston and "The Ledge," Newport, was a member of the committee in charge which planned the fete to be as amusing for the youngsters as for their august elders. With this in view, there was an animal booth and a play given by the children of the colony and officers of the Navy and their wives. The grounds and the usual booths was most attractively decorated under the direction of Mrs. Reginald Norman. Others in charge of the bazaar were Mrs. Dudley Davis, Mrs. Charles S. Whitman, the Misses Carlotta Havemeyer, Helen Moran and Edith Wetmore.

President Lowell of Harvard and Mrs. Lowell are to be house guests of Dr. and Mrs. Harry A. underwriters of the recent $15,000,000 bond issue professed to know of no developments in the company which might be construed as adverse. A company official refused to discuss the probable dividend action. It was assumed in Wall street circles that the sale of the bond issue would permit the company to readjust itself to changed conditions, but what progress has been made since the bond flotation is not generally known."

The company showed a balance for the $29,928,900 common stock equal to $5.75 per share, after an inventory write-down of about $700,000, in its annual report for 1920. It was said by financial men that as prices had been showing a decline since the close of the year, it was probable that further depreciation was necessary in order to bring the book value of inventory nearer to the market value.

Early in June the company sold $15,000,000 8 per cent 15-year convertible notes to provide for the maturity of approximately $7,000,000 notes matured June 15 and to pay off bank loans. These notes were sold by a banking syndicate at par.

FORE RIVER WORKMEN APPEAL TO GOVERNMENT

Shipbuilders recently dropped from the plants at Fore River sent to Congress today copies of the resolutions adopted after a mass meeting presided over by James Edwards, president of the Quincy Central Labor Union. The resolutions, indorsed by the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, ask that immediate government action be taken to remedy conditions among the workingmen's families in the Quincy and Fore River districts. The plants at Fore River dismissed 2,600 men last week, declaring that decreased appropriations for naval work had caused them to cancel many contracts. The men claim many families face destitution as a result.

British officials are hopeful that the Sinn Feiners will adopt a conciliatory attitude and that they will give up their demand for an Irish republic. It is believed here that the Irish will not insist upon their right to maintain an army and navy, but will content themselves with an Irish police force.

The Unionists of South Ireland, who are already in accord with the republicans, have been carrying on conversations with the Ulster Unionists, and there seems to be ground for the belief that they have reached an agreement of some kind.

PRESIDENT OF PURDUE KILLED IN ROCKIES

Dashed to Death in Effort to Save Wife, Who Is Injured by Fall

By International News Service.

Banff, Alberta, July 27.—Alpine guides today have added a new story of heroism and hardship to the annals of the Canadian Rockies—an episode that cost the life of Dr. W. E. Stone, president of Purdue University at Lafayette, Ind., and seriously injured Mrs. Stone.

Although only meagre details of the tragedy have been received here, searchers said it was evident that Dr. Stone gave his life in an effort to rescue his wife.

The body of Dr. Stone was found at the foot of a deep crevice far up the slopes of Mount Eanon on Sunday by guides who had been searching several days. Mrs. Stone, unconscious and badly injured, was found in another crevice nearby. The guides brought Mrs. Stone to a temporary hospital at Mount Assiniboine, south of Banff. Doctors and nurses have been rushed to attend her. Chances for her recovery, it was said today, are good.

FREE PRISONERS, U. S. DEMAND OF SOVIET

Washington, July 27.—The United States has made new demands upon Soviet Russia for the immediate release of American citizens, who are now held prisoner in Russia, it was learned at the State Department today.

The note of this government voicing the demands has been despatched to the American consular agent at Reval to be handed to the Soviet representative there for communication to his government.

This is understood to be the first direct demand made upon Soviet Russia by this government for the release of the Americans, previous overtures having been carried on through neutral agencies.

NEW YORK POLICE ROUND UP 50 DRUG ADDICTS

Woman Charged With Forging Roosevelt's Name Given Sanity Test

MRS. EMMA R. BURKETT,

Indiana woman, now at Bellevue Hospital, New York, under observation following the forgery of Roosevelt's name to a note.

New York, July 27.—Mrs. Emma Richardson Burkett of Hillsdale, Ind., who is charged with forging the signature of ex-President Roosevelt to a note, has been committed to the observation ward at Bellevue Hospital for ten days' observation.

The ruling followed the testimony of Dr. Perry Lichtenstein, Tombs prison physician, that the woman is suffering from a form of insanity.

Prosecutor Hamilton of Jerseyville, Ind., who arrived here, told Assistant District Attorney John T. Dooling that the woman had been before him once before charged with forging an $18,000 note. At that time, he said, she admitted that the Roosevelt note was a forgery.

CICOTTE AGREED TO SERIES DEAL, SAYS MAHARG

Chicago, July 27. — William ("Billy") Maharg, the State's last witness in the Black Sox scandal trial, today testified on the stand that he heard Eddie Cicotte tell Bill Burns that he and Chick Gandil were going to throw the 1919 world's series.

The alleged conversations between the former White Sox player and Burns took place, according to Maharg, at the Ansonia Hotel in New York, shortly before the series.

Maharg's inside story of the bribery, double-crossing and intrigue in connection with the throwing of the series was considered a strong card for the prosecution.

The State was expected to finish its case with Maharg's testimony today.

SHERIFF TOLD TO ARREST SMALL

Illinois Governor Fails to Surrender During Period of Grace

Springfield, Ill., July 27.—Three warrants for the arrest of Governor Len Small of Illinois were turned over today to a sheriff for immediate service.

The "long arm of the law" by this action began to reach out for Illinois' chief executive. It also marked the opening shot by the State in its battle to compel the Governor to submit to the jurisdiction of the State criminal courts.

The twenty-four hours of grace allowed the governor for a "peaceful surrender" have expired, it was announced. The Governor, last reported in Chicago, has announced his willingness to submit to arrest in that city, but local authorities desire to arrest him in the State capital.

'MYSTERY GIRL' OF SALEM FAMILY

Miss Mary Cottell Agrees to Return Home With Her Brother

By International News Service.

White Plains, N. Y., July 27.—The "mystery woman," an attractive brunette about thirty years old, fashionably dressed, who has been in the jail here as a vagrant since last Saturday, threw her arms about her brother's neck today and agreed to return with him to the family home in Salem, Mass.

She is Miss Mary Cottell, daughter of a former wealthy business man of Salem. Her brother, Samuel Cottell, reached White Plains last night, telling Chief of Police John Harman that he had received information from the police chief of Salem that led him to believe his sister was the "mystery woman."

He waited this morning in police headquarters and when the young woman saw him she ran to him and wept.

Last Saturday night the young woman stepped up to Patrolman Murphy, who was on duty in Main street, and said she was cold and hungry and wanted to get lodging at the jail. She was booked as a vagrant, and although the police officials and Magistrate Holden tried to find out something about her in order to give assistance, she refused, saying she would rather stay in jail and that she had a special mission to perform by remaining there.

On Monday she relaxed from secrecy long enough to say that her name was Mary Cottell and that she had been living in New York City. Her description was wired to the police of the important cities.

Her brother said that his sister was the "spoiled child" of the family, and she had become bitter after her father's death three years ago, when it was found that most of his fortune had been lost.

The family attempted to convert their estate into a fashionable boarding house, he said, but the venture failed and Mary left. He said he had been searching for her since then.

MEMBER BOSTON BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU

MAY USE SAME TITLE ON TWO TEST PICTURES

Nothing in Song Contest Rules to Prevent Artist From Adopting This Ruse

One question which comes to the Test Editor from many participants in the Boston American's $6,000 Songs of the World Title Test is this:

"May two pictures have the same title?"

They may. Or three pictures, or four, or twenty. There is nothing in the rules to prevent Mr. Artist using the same title for two OR MORE pictures.

He had the same privilege in the Movie Play Title Test. In that Test he did not use it. That does not mean that he will not use it in this Test. It does not mean that he will, but he may. Nothing to prevent it.

MAKES ODD REQUEST.

The strangest request received yesterday by the Test Editor came from Brockton. The writer asked to be supplied with "all the Test Pictures from No. 1 to No. 39, inclusive." The Test Editor was compelled to write his regrets. Back pictures are not to be had, unless by some miracle, the dealer has kept a set. Back numbers of the Boston American are not on sale at this office. For his own purpose, the Test Editor receives three papers daily. There is no way he knows of by which anybody may now start in the present Test.

In order that nobody may be able to say, a few weeks from now, that he did not know about it, let it be repeated today that Pictures No. 23 and 24 have been dropped from the Songs of the World Title Test. Pictures No. 61 and 62 will be substituted. The Title of No. 23 is, "The Pretty Maid Milking Her Cow." There was no reading matter on that picture. There was no title in the List to fit it unless you turned the picture upside down. The Correct Title of No. 24 is "Constantinople." The ancient name of that city was "Byzantium." Not to waste any space on the subject, these pictures are dropped because the Boston American has found it expedient to tell EVERBODY the correct titles.

TEST OF 60 PICTURES.

The Test will remain a Test of SIXTY pictures. You may discard Nos. 23 and 24 when you mail your parcels but be sure to include Nos. 61 and 62.

The Test Editor has received letters, and even telephone calls, thanking him for his action with reference to these pictures. There was nothing else to do, in fairness to EVERYBODY. A fair field and no favors!

Be ready, tomorrow, for a much longer List of Titles. If the artist refuses to get down to business, the Test Editor will have to. The artist, by the way, IS about to produce the goods. Watch your step!

Song Title Test Rules

The Boston American Songs of the World Title Test is a test of skill and judgment open to all readers of the Boston American, irrespective of age, living in any city or town in New England or Canada.

Two hundred and twenty cash awards will be given by this newspaper to its readers who submit the largest percentage of correct titles to the sixty pictures to be published one each day consecutively (Sundays excepted) in the Boston American.

All employes of the Boston American and their families are absolutely barred from participating in the awards.

The test will consist of 60 pictures, each representing the title of a well-known song to be printed one each day in the Boston American; the first picture on Wednesday, June 8, 1921.

Participation in any other contest which has been run, which is now running or which may be run by the Boston American will not debar anyone from entering this test.

Every participant or any or all members of a family will be allowed to submit one set of pictures, but each set must contain only ONE TITLE to each picture, and no participant shall be entitled to more than one award and not more than one award shall be given in any one family.

Each and every title must be neatly written or printed on the coupon furnished by the Boston American; or on a page of some book form by itself, accompanied either by the picture furnished by the Boston American, or a pen or pencil copy thereof, and must have the name, residence, etc., of the participant on each title blank.

Do not send your titles in "list" form, i. e., do not write titles under one another on a piece of paper.

In case there are not complete sets of correct titles, awards will be given to the person submitting the nearest correct solutions, giving weight to skill and judgment.

In case of a tie awards will be made on the basis of neatness, judgment and accuracy, but if the tie cannot be decided in that way the tied participants will receive similar awards.

Under no circumstances should participants send in their titles before the end of the Test, as any sent in before the last picture is printed will not be considered. KEEP your titles from day to day and at the end of the Test arrange them in numerical order and then send them in all together at one time.

Time will not be a factor in making the awards. The first titles sent in after the Test closes will stand no better than the last submitted.

All titles must be delivered to the Boston American title headquarters, at No. 80 Summer street, Boston 8, Mass., either by mail or in person within the specified time limit which will be announced later.

All envelopes or packages containing titles must be legibly addressed as follows: "Song Title Editor, No. 80 Summer street, Boston 8, Mass., P. O. Box 239," and each envelope or package must bear the name and address of the sender legibly written or stamped on the upper left-hand corner.

As all pictures in the Test will contain written or printed matter, if mailed, it is absolutely necessary that the packages be fully prepaid at postal letter rates, as mail of this character goes to the postoffice as first-class matter. The Boston American reserves the right to refuse to consider any sets of titles on which charges for postal delivery are not fully prepaid.

There will be no title or answer book to buy. Lists of Song Titles will be printed in the Boston American. The list appearing will contain among others the correct titles.

Participants who desire further information should address their inquiries to the Song Title Editor, No. 80 Summer street, Boston 8, Mass. Questions will be answered as far as possible through the columns of the Boston American. If participants desire personal replies, they should enclose sufficient postage for such a reply, or they may phone Main 5180 or call in person.

The Boston American reserves the right to make any change in or addition to these conditions that it may deem necessary for fairly and properly conducting the Test, and the decision of the Boston American Song Title Editor on any question which may arise will be absolutely final, and the entry of a participant is a complete acceptance of all conditions and regulations now made or to be made.

Want to Keep Your Hair Perpetually Curly?

Perpetually wavy or curly hair is now within the means of every woman to possess. One need only get a few ounces of plain liquid silmerine from the druggist and apply a little of it occasionally with a clean tooth brush before doing up the hair. When this dries the most beautiful and natural looking waves and creases imaginable are in evidence. Wind and heat do not affect the curliness as where a heated iron has been used.

Liquid silmerine is so pure and harmless there is not the slightest danger of spotting the scalp or streaking the hair, and it leaves no sticky or greasy trace. It will also be appreciated as a beneficial dressing, as it keeps the hair so soft, silky and lustrous.—Advertisement.

FIGHT TO SAVE CAMP DEVENS IN CONGRESS

Dallinger Promises Action in House to Prevent Abandonment

A spirited battle will be waged in Congress to prevent the abandonment of Camp Devens by the War Department.

Frederick W. Dallinger of Cambridge is the first New England Congressman to promise action in response to the storm of protest.

In a telegram to the Boston American from Washington, Congressman Dallinger says:

"I find that the War Department will recommend to Congress the abandonment of Camp Devens in spite of all protests. Shall do all possible to prevent Congress from authorizing this action."

FOUR CAMPS RETAINED.

Official orders from the War Department issued yesterday announced that it has decided to retain Camp Dix, N. J.; Camp Travis, Texas; Camp Lewis, Wash., and Camp Knox, Ky.

The camps to be abandoned are Devens, Mass.; Sherman, Ohio; Grant, Ill.; Pike, Ark.; Meade, Mr.; Jackson, S. C., and Bragg, N. C.

Brigadier-General Edward L. Logan of the National Guard of Massachusetts is strongly opposed to the abandonment of Camp Devens as proposed in the economy drive of the War Department.

This cantonment has proved its usefulness in many directions, according to General Logan, who is very emphatic in his statements about giving it up.

He thinks that it occupies a strategic point in New England and that Camp Dix in New Jersey cannot compare with it.

IMPORTANT POST.

"When I was last at Devens, where I witnessed the maoeuvres of the National Guard, I was impressed with the importance of this cantonment to New England," he said. "If we are going to have anything like military training in this part of the country, Camp Devens is better situated and equipped than Camp Dix. Those who have been in both camps and studied both conditions feel this way about it.

"Then take the Citizens' Military Training camp which will open in August and last one month; what's the use of booming this in New England unless we can preserve such a centre for training as Camp Devens affords?

"New England must have a centre for military trainnig and Camp Dix should be abandoned, as Camp Devens offers more inducements for such training. I am thoroughly in favor of retaining this cantonment, while not losing sight of the fact that the War Department must practice economy."

ADRIFT 12 DAYS WITHOUT FOOD IN OPEN BOAT

Nantucket Man Rescued Off Maine Coast Says Rain Water Kept Him Alive

Rockland, Me., July 27.—After spending twelve days adrift in an open boat with no food and only rain water caught in occasional showers, A. B. Tunning of Nantucket is now at the Whitehead Coast Guard station.

His mind is wandering and he is terribly weakened from starvation and thirst. He was rescued twenty miles off the island of Metinic by fishermen, who towed his boat to the coast guard station.

Tunning left Nantucket on July 13, bound for Plymouth, in a 42-foot boat. He took a small supply of food. He ate this on the first day. Suddenly engine trouble developed and he was soon drifting helplessly into the dense mists which had begun to roll in on the coast.

The first day Tunning felt confident that he would be picked up by a passing steamer, as he was in the line of traffic. But the fog became so thick that all hope of rescue seemed lost. Then thirst and hunger hit him and his sufferings were great. Occasional showers fell and he managed to catch enough water to keep him alive.

He later lost all consciousness of his whereabouts and when found his mind was wandering. It was clear at times and in a lucid moment he told his story.

Worcester Boy Wins Honor

Worcester, July 27.—Philip Howard Hensel of No. 3 Hitchcock road, a graduate of Northwestern College, Boston, has been awarded the Phi Tau Kappa key for rare aptitude in his studies.

Lawrence Boy, Denied Baseball Glove, Runs Away from Home

Lawrence, July 27.—Eleven-year-old Alfred McNeil, son of Mrs. Rose McNeil of No. 499 Essex street, could not have a baseball glove in time for a juvenile game to be played Saturday and as a result he has left home. The police have been asked to assist in finding the youngster. He did not confide his wants to his mother regarding the wanted glove, but stole a relative's partly filled carton of cigarettes to sell them and get enough money for the glove. Failure of the boy to return home has alarmed the McNeil household. Relatives in Haverhill have been asked to aid in search for him.

He will be arraigned in the Taunton Court today.

EACH NEW TEST PROVES THE POWER OF TANLAC

Mrs. Catherine Lane Among Latest to Report Astonishing Recovery by Use of Master Medicine.

The list of testimonials in behalf of the merits of Tanlac grows daily as new tests of its powers are made. Mrs. Catherine Lane, wife of a prominent farmer, residing at 306 Brookside road, Needham, Mass., in relating her experience with the medicine, said:

"I have just finished taking my third bottle of Tanlac and it has helped me so much that I just can't praise it enough. For the past four years my stomach was so out of order I was actually afraid to eat. After meals I would bloat terribly and often got so short of breath I felt like I would smother. My head ached, I had dizzy spells, and had almost forgotten what a good night's sleep was. I was so weak I had to sleep down stairs, as I couldn't climb the steps to my bedroom.

"Well, I just kept getting worse, and was just about to give up hope when I saw Tanlac so highly praised and got my son-in-law to bring me a bottle from Boston. The results from the first bottle were astonishing, and now my digestion seems to be perfect, for I never have any trouble with my stomach, no matter what I eat. The headaches, dizziness, and nervousness have disappeared, and everybody in the house has been talking about how well I sleep and how much better I look. Although I am sixty-seven years of age, I do all my housework with ease and can get up and down stairs without a bit of trouble. I never heard of anything to equal Tanlac."

Tanlac is distributed by International Proprietaries, Inc., and sold in Boston by all Liggett's drug stores.—Advertisement.

SHAW INVITED TO LECTURE IN U. S. ON DEBS

Coming of Noted English Writer Would Stir Washington, Hapgood Says

By NORMAN HAPGOOD,
Boston American Staff Correspondent

Washington, July 27.—George Bernard Shaw has been asked to come to this country to make a series of lectures on the confinement of Debs and other political prisoners. The letter ought to be reaching him about this time.

Naturally Shaw's answer cannot be predicted. Nothing about him can be predicted. If he does the conventional thing, as he not infrequently does, he will decline. The trip would require a good deal of audacity of a practical kind.

Shaw has plenty of audacity when mere ideas are concerned. Such a trip as is proposed, however, would mean audacity of a different sort.

It would be an enterprise wholly objectionable to the ruling powers in Washington.

Moreover, it would be objectionable to those forces in the community which have been strong enough to frighten the administration out of its broadly advertised decision to deal with these prisoners immediately on taking office last March.

If Shaw wanted to do it, however, he is peculiarly fitted to meet the organized forces that would turn up at his meetings and throw out remarks implying that the richest form of patriotism is the continued imprisonment of a noble old man for failing to appreciate the blessings that the war has bestowed upon us.

Shaw is gifted in dealing with hostile elements in his audiences. Witness his comment, when, on a curtain call, a man in the gallery expressed his disapprobation by booing.

"I agree with you, my friend, but what are you and I against so many?"

Those who want Shaw to come over think he ought to make a trip to Atlanta to see Debs. Whether he could get a permit or not is an interesting question.

It was rather easy to do so a few months ago, at the time that I went down, but since the administration has become so alarmed over the situation permission is much harder to obtain.

During the two years and a quarter that Debs has been in jail the hardship of it has been to some extent lessened by the visits permitted, which enabled the former candidate for the Presidency to have brief conversations with his friends. Since July 1 these visits have been stopped.

One thing Mr. Shaw should take into consideration is that there is no danger of his being too late. Within the last few weeks the administration has grimly set its teeth and determined that there will be no pardon at least until the last remaining technical detail between this country and Germany has been worked out.

It has also decided that even then there will be no amnesty proclamation. A little while ago wide publicity was given to the statement that the European amnesty proclamations, as well as those issued in this country after the Civil War and after the alien and sedition acts, were being eagerly studied.

This extraordinary change of policy should not be identified with the mania that attacked Mr. Wilson on the subject. In Wilson's case it was what is known in the slang of the day as a "complex" or righteousness that caught him when he had abandoned his former peace without victory ideas and gone into the war.

Anybody who failed to change with him when he made that change really seemed to him so wicked that no mercy should be shown.

I believe Mr. Wilson pardoned something like six hundred convicts, some in prison for murder, some for rape, but he honestly believed Mr. Debs and others who clung to their pacifism after Mr. Wilson abandoned his were too evil for any leniency.

The change in the present administration's policy is not of the same sort. It is an estimate of what would be popular.

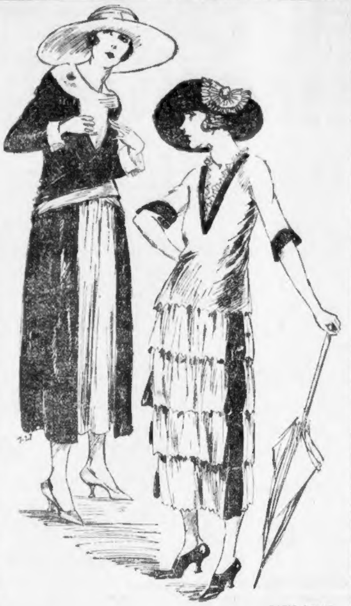
Fresh From Paris



PARIS, France.

TWO frocks for Summer afternoons at the club depart with success from the almost universal black and white mode. In the model at the left marine blue crepe makes most of the bodice, and the tunic worn above a pale pink crepe skirt. The pink crepe appears in the yoke and cuffs and in the bands edging the wrapped sections of the bodice, which is gathered slightly where the yoke and front sections meet. The tunic, also, has a little fulness and extends an inch or so below the crepe skirt. A wide-brimmed untrimmed hat of pale pink crepe accompanies the frock.

MUSTARD yellow, which vies for honors with reds and several shades of blue wherever color is seen, makes a Roshanara crepe afternoon dress of much distinction. The V necked, short-sleeved over-blouse has its edge cut in points to match the four ruffles that compose its skirt, while loops of dark blue cire ribbon as deep as the ruffles are arranged down the sides of the skirt. Dark blue straw makes the hat, which has a cire ribbon ornament of mustard yellow.

COURT OFFICER ARRESTED FOR POLL TAX

Charles E. Barnett Taken in Custody After Drawing Salary

Charles E. Barnett, Superior Court officer, residing at No. 104 Nightingale street, Dorchester, was arrested in the city treasurer's office today by Constable John Young for non-payment of his poll tax for 1919 and 1920.

Barnett, whose salary is $2,454 yearly, had just drawn $87 from the treasury on his salary account when Young stepped up to him and threatened to arrest him if he did not pay his poll tax. Barnett protested that being a court officer, he would not be arrested. Young, however, took him in tow and led him to the tax office.

There Barnett paid his 1920 tax, which had swelled through penalties and constable's dues from its original $5 to $11. He promised to pay the 1919 tax shortly. It was originally $2, and will amount to $8 or $9 now.

TAX REVISION GIVEN FIRST PLACE

Program Agreed On by Harding and Republican Senators

Washington, July 27.—Tax revision ahead of all other legislation was the program which President Harding and a group of Republican Senators agreed on at a dinner at the White House last night, it was disclosed today.

The President held that tax revision was of paramount importance and that the country's demands for immediate relief must be heeded, even though it was necessary to delay action on tariff and railroad legislation.

Taxation on a basis of spending, and the purchase tax, were taken up for consideration today by the House ways and means committee studying tax revision plans.

The spenders tax was advocated by Representative Ogden Mills of New York and the purchase tax by C. P. Landreth of Philadelphia.

The sales tax, advocated by the United States Chamber of Commerce, and other organizations, has been laid away in the committee pigeon hole for the present. The committee has decided against consumption taxes at this time, although the sales tax plan, will certainly be brought to the fore if an attempt is made to jam the soldiers' bonus bill through Congress in December.

VATICAN APPEALS TO STOP GUERILLA WAR

Rome, July 27.—The Vatican is becoming anxious over the hostilities between the Fascisti and the Communists. Pope Benedict XV today issued an appeal through the Osservatore Romano, official organ of the Vatican, asking both factions to cease their guerilla warfare. Despite the warning of Premier Bonomi, battles continue between the rival parties.

HARDING ASKED WHEN HE WILL FAVOR BONUS

Legion Representative Serves Demand Upon President in Person

Washington, July 27.—A demand that the administration inform ex-soldiers when it will favor the passage of soldier bonus bill was presented to President Harding today by Gilbert Bettman, chairman of the legislative committee of the American Legion.

"The demand for this compensation will not and cannot be downed," Bettman told the President. He declared that the reaction to the President's appeal for delay has brought forth only increased demand for the compensation. "It is based on simple justice," Bettman said.

Bettman informed the President that it was his belief that the majority of the ex-soldiers would not choose a cash bonus but would desire other forms of compensation.

GREAT INTEREST IN SWIMMING CARNIVAL

Girls at Pools and Beaches Preparing for the Boston American's Big Event

Fill in Blanks, Girls, and Join in Big Swimming Race

Entry for Boston American Girls' Championship Swimming race:

Name..................................

Age..................................

Address..................................

....

....

Reports from swimming pools and beach resorts in and about Boston show remarkable interest in the big water carnival and race to be held under the auspices of the Boston American in the Charles River Basin, Saturday afternoon, August 27, from 2 to 4:30 o'clock.

Maidens who heretofore never interested themselves in long distance swims are surprising friends with the manner in which they glide through the rippling waters in practicing for the coming race. It is figured that at least 100 girls will take part.

Out at Tenean beach in Dorchester the younger set of girl swimmers are enthusiastic over the prospect of being allowed to take part in the big Boston American swim and promise to be well represented in the lineup when the starter fires the shot that will set in motion the great race. Savin Hill beach girls say Tenean girls will have to go some to beat them.

Down at the North End park beach the girls are in high glee over the opportunity afforded them by the Boston American of swinging into the championship class. One little girl of Italian extraction glided gracefully through the water and told her companion that she was practicing the trudgeon stroke so as to be able to win first prize in the coming race.

Remember, girls, the race is absolutely free. There is no entrance fee. All you have to do is fill out the blank on this page and mail it to the Swimming Editor, Boston American, No. 80 Summer street, Boston, Mass. Your name will then be recorded. If possible send along with your application a photograph of yourself in swimming attire. Be sure, though, to sign your own name.

The course of the race, one and one-half miles, is from the raft of the Union Boat Club house, at the foot of Revere street, up stream to a stake boat near Harvard bridge, where the turn will be made. No better course could be selected. Handsome prizes will be given the first five to finish. The first girl to cross the tape will be adjudged New England amateur champion for 1921. All girls who finish will receive a handsome souvenir.

Arrangements have been made with John J. (Maffit) Flaherty and his corps of Revere Beach life-savers to be on hand to safeguard the participants in the race. Plenty of boats will be provided and it is planned to have guards keep in touch with each girl during her struggle over the course.

Superintendent West of the Metropolitan Park Commission police will have a number of swift going launches in the stream in charge of Lieutenant Albert Chapman. Lieutenant Breivogel will look after the land forces. From 100,000 to 150,000 persons are expected to view the race and water sports from the Charles River Esplanade.

SANE VIEW OF LEAGUE SOUGHT BY ANDERSON

Judge of U. S. Court to Attend Sittings at Geneva Next Month

With the purpose of getting a "sane view of the League of Nations," Judge George W. Anderson of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, will sail next Saturday for Europe, accompanied by the Rev. Edward Cummings of Cambridge, secretary of the World Peace Foundation.

Judge Anderson is now on his way to Washington. He will return to New York and depart from there on the steamship Centennial State for Plymouth, England.

In speaking of his trip, Judge Anderson said: "I am going to Europe to watch things for a few weeks and to get a sane view of the League of Nations. I shall go to London, Brussels and Geneva. I don't know whether I will get to Berlin or not.

"I am going entirely in a private capacity, but I wish to find out just what the conditions are in Europe. I shall attend sittings of the League of Nations at Geneva for awhile. I have letters of introduction to many persons and I expect to meet Colonel House, for whom I have a very high regard indeed and whom I have known for some years.

"I also intend," said Judge Anderson, "to meet Walker D. Hines, the former director-general of railroads, who is now doing some remarkable work as arbitrator of questions pertaining to river shipping in Europe."

MAY ATTEMPT TO SALVAGE LUSITANIA

Proposal Made to Try on Liner Method That Failed With Esperanto

Will the methods that failed to raise the Gloucester cup winner, Esperanto, from her cozy bed in the "Graveyard of Ships" prove successful in salvaging the treasure liner Lusitania, war time submarine victim, hidden beneath twenty fathoms of water off the Irish coast for six years?

Engineer A. B. Saliger thinks so. A group of local capitalists are now in process of being convinced of the possibilities of success. And many who saw Saliger's unsuccessful attempts to raise the Esperanto believe the same methods would bring the Lusitania to the surface.

Huge pontoons, emptied of air, are lowered to the bottom and attached to the hull of the ship that is to be raised, under Saliger's system. Air is then pumped into the floats, and their tremendous lifting power is brought to bear on the sunken hulk—with the result that it comes to the surface.

In the case of the Esperanto this method was employed, and it finally failed, not through any fault of the system, it is said, but because the wooden ship, battered by waves, rocks and tides, went to pieces.

But the Lusitania, built of steel, resting securely on a sandy bottom, will still be intact, it is claimed. And those who are familiar with Saliger and his work, which, they declare, will revolutionize salvaging processes, are confident that the famous old ship can be brought to the surface.

The Lusitania went down carrying to the bottom gold bullion valued at millions of dollars. Almost any effort that would raise her would be repaid, as the liner would prove a veritable treasure trove for its salvagers.

"Scrape Your Tongue" Dental Chief Tells First Corps Men

Major Chester Denham, dental officer for the enlisted men of the First Corps Area, has invented a new one.

It is:

"Scrape your tongue."

In giving out his list of instructions for care of the teeth, Major Denham includes the admonition that the tongue must be either scraped or brushed every time the teeth are cleansed.

It is also a good plan, asserts the major, to practice brushing one's teeth before a mirror. This, he says, perfects the technique.

THREATS STOP SODA PROTEST BY BOYS

Springfield Newsboys Fear Revenge by Merchants; Call Off Parade

Springfield, July 27.—As a result of threats and the use of coercive measures the newsboys, who planned to parade as a protest against the present prices charged in this city for ice cream and sodas, have been forced to abandon their parade plans.

The boys claim that threats of revenge were received by them from all quarters.

Mayor Edwin F. Leonard, who has denied that profiteering exists, owns three large drug stores, each of which is equipped with a fountain and soda parlor.

Leading merchants, who contribute to the support of the Boys' City Club, protested against the demonstration and one confectionery firm offered to supply the ice cream for the next Boys' Club banquet if the parade was cancelled. The leaders of the newsboys state that so great were the measures of intimidation that they were compelled to surrender.

The soda-dispensing mayor has claimed that the prevailing price list are in every respect fair.

Many letters have poured in to the office of Chairman Hultman, of the Commission on Necessaries of Life, announcing cuts in prices for ice cream sodas, cones and soft drinks. Most of these letters, Commissioner Hultman stated, came from outside of Boston.

ENGINEER NAMED FOR FERRY IMPROVEMENTS

Mayor Peters has appointed Austin B. Henderson, as temporary assistant engineer in the public works department, at $225 a month, for a period of two months in the bridge and ferry division.

He is to be employed in designing new ferry drops and his compensation will be charged to the appropriation for ferry improvements. In the absence of an eligible list the commissioner of civil service has authorized this appointment provisionally.

SHIMMIED FOR FISH! Gilda Gray, who, according to the experts, shakes "a mean shoulder," blocked the traffic at Long Beach when she jumped out of her little Japanese kimona and showed them the fashionable ague. (Int.)

HONORED! After suffering the humiliation and bodily discomfort of a sentence in prison, Professor John MacNeill, M. P. (denoted by arrow), has received an honorary from the National University of Dublin to signalize his release. Several women also received degrees. (Int.)

AWAY SHE GOES! Mrs. E. E. Harwood of Olympia Fields was one of the leading golfers at the Chicago city matches, held at Flossmoor. She has powerful drive despite her easy swing. (Int.)

POESY. Marie Seton, widow of Major Breton (British army) and one of the most beautiful women in England, whose latest work has been accepted by the Queen. (W. W.)

ABOATING WE MUST GO! The poor old automobile has been made do duty for myriad things, but it now remains for John A. Cowan, president of the Kansas City (Mo.) Conservatory of Music, to invent an auto top which can easily be converted into a motor boat—with engine and complete equipment. The boat top, as shown in photo, slides off on rollers and folds in two. Can be easily handled by one man. He has also invented a hot and cold water device for the car. Ideal for camping out. Has usual beds and cooking affairs. Int.

[illegible]

[illegible] that we can be sent to jail for it — [illegible] years, it might be."

"How can I verify that?" I asked.

They gave me the street and number of [illegible] on William street and [illegible] was the number, the nearest place to go and see a copy of the proclamation issued by order of General Cameron. It was signed.

And a further felony to tear down the paper it is printed on [illegible].

A great country to live in, wasn't it? Having taken away a man's life, the wife and babies of the man [illegible] to starve. Copies of the proclamation are all [illegible]. It was only last month that I was there on the walls of Limerick [illegible] some men from the hills [illegible] to tear them down [illegible].

The morning when I went out to find the barracks where Keane was to be executed I found them without having to ask where they were. Crowds of people might be going in any one of a hundred [illegible] half past seven o'clock in [illegible] but people who looked [illegible] people looked [illegible] be going to only one place in [illegible] that morning.

[illegible] and Tan sentries with bayonets fixed were running back the [illegible] from the walls of the barracks. As I came in the street a crowd of several hundred mostly women were retreating slowly before the bayonets. Some of the young women stood defiantly up.

The Black and Tans [illegible] to push them back with the muzzles and butts before them [illegible]. I did [illegible] see any women [illegible] with the bayonets, although it looked at times as if they would be.

There was no stirring many of those young women or old ones either. All they thought of was the safety of the men. After one savage charge by the Black and Tans the girls came [illegible] back [illegible] that the men stay back. The boys must stay back. They will [illegible], noting several hardy young men who [illegible] bayonets.

Our street and another street nearer heard the sound of shooting from around the barracks corner in the other street. Once the head of a column of people reached the corner. A young girl in front held high a red banner of the Sacred Heart. There was a great struggle to maintain that banner aloft, but the bayonets of the Black and Tans finally parted the crowd. I then saw the banner being hauled down.

It was a series of surgings forward by the women of our street and bayonet chargings by the Black and Tans. The men [illegible] almost without moving, even as the Black and Tans dared them [illegible] moving sullenly [illegible] when the women cried out to them to make a care.

What the people wished to do was to get near to the barracks walls and pray [illegible] for the soul of the man about to die. They wanted to let him know that they were there [illegible] with him that morning. They wanted him to be hearing their voices while he would be standing there waiting with unbound eyes for the volley.

Such was their sole intention, meaning harm to no one, to even the detested Black and Tans [illegible] the doing of it; but such intentions help to exalt the spirit of a people who should be subjugated, and so they must be [illegible].

The Black and Tans by a series of bayonet rushes at last drove the people on my street back to a distance of five hundred feet or so from the barracks walls. It was then within [illegible] minutes of the hour and the men and women were forming in groups to pray. But that would not [illegible].

[illegible] from their [illegible] and [illegible] Black and Tans indicated that they were satisfied. I noticed several young men, evidently [illegible] from the hills, beginning to grow restive at this time, but before they could move forward some young women raised their hands and cried: "Let us say [illegible]. We must stay back. Sure it's shooting ye they'll be."

The crowd formed into groups to pray. One group of little girls, ten or twelve years of age, sang sacred hymns. With [illegible] held high and faces set toward the line of armed men [illegible] young voices [illegible] carry beyond the [illegible] walls [illegible]. [illegible] the mothers of the [illegible] may [illegible]. In some of the [illegible] will [illegible] elected [illegible]. Is it any wonder [illegible] fight?

[illegible] the Black and Tans looked down the street [illegible] debating whether to break in [illegible] singing of the [illegible] the corner of the [illegible] stood [illegible]. [illegible] far [illegible] at [illegible]. [illegible] yards [illegible] a few yards [illegible] was [illegible] about the same.

An easy target he would be if a man but had [illegible] weapon."

After the [illegible] finished their hymns, [illegible] the people [illegible] front of [illegible] before [illegible] the street with [illegible] to get [illegible] of the crowd [illegible].

One of [illegible]. It was getting close to eight o'clock [illegible] could feel [illegible] in the [illegible]. The voice of the [illegible] the responses of the people, especially the women, louder and [illegible].

Two or three men near me took out their [illegible] at their watches [illegible] at nine. It was two minutes to eight.

[illegible] heads [illegible].

[illegible] I thought I heard a crash.

[illegible] with the rosary [illegible] companion. "That's [illegible]."

The other raised his head and [illegible].

With the field in the singles reduced to eight players, two of the survivors formerly lived in Japan, although for a number of years they have been traveling around the world competing in championship tennis.

RICHARDS GETS TO RANKS OF THE GREAT

No Dimming the Glory of 19-Year-Old Tennis Player

Vincent Richards, only nineteen years old, unquestionably has reached the ranks of the tennis great. He has been extending the top notchers for several seasons and every now and then has come through with a sensational victory. At the age of fifteen he shared with Tilden the national doubles championship, at seventeen he was the national indoor title holder, and now, still in his teens, he is setting up a season's record that has startled even his best friends.

After going through five important tournaments, greater [illegible] the climax with an astounding [illegible] Tilden has been [illegible] his best at present.

Yet his decisive defeats of Charles S. Garland and Watson M. Washburn last week did not strengthen that belief. There is no dimming the glory of Richards' triumph.

[illegible]

His forehand drive is a thing of beauty, forceful, accurate and hard to handle, and his backhand has improved considerably this year in the matter of control if not in pace.

[illegible]

Vincent Richards has "arrived."

Eddie Rickenbacher, in his present form, must be given the call. True they bet on Miss Jemima last time the two met, as if the issue had already been decided. Probably it was, but they failed to declare Eddie "in." I look for the Skinner representative to outrun and outgame the filly.

* * *

Swell Combs is sure to be right there or thereabouts. There was quite an overnight [illegible] on the latter—Three Ways [illegible] stable is extra [illegible] at present. There is no reason [illegible] the argument that Kuklux should not repeat his winning effort of Monday. He is a fair sort and only ran to his best recent private form.

JOHNNY WILSON RECEIVES A $40,000 OFFER

By JACK CONWAY.

Johnny Wilson, proud boss of the middleweight division, has been offered $40,000 to box Gus Platts of England, middleweight champion of Europe, in a New York ring. Charles Harvey, Platts' manager, is back of a syndicate which is prepared to stage the international battle.

"Platts is a great right-hand puncher," writes Harvey. "And it will be a right hand socker who will grab Wilson's crown. George Robinson, only a fair puncher, has proved that the middleweight champion is wide open for a right-hand wallop to the jaw. Furthermore, Wilson sags under ordinary smashes. Platts can punch three times as hard as Robinson. Consequently he would knock Wilson out if he hit him on the jaw with a right-hand punch.

In passing Meyers also put in a good word for Freddy Madden of East Boston, who is eager to [illegible] fighting future of Frankie Conway of Philadelphia.

Jim MacDonald is anxious to match Greek Algar with Nate Siegal, Paul Doyle or any of our noble welterweights. MacDonald considers Algar one of the best men of his weight in the East. He points to the fact that the South Ender can punch as well as box. A knockout blow is quite an asset for any young man who hopes to reach the pugilistic heights.

Charley Cardio was also numbered among the callers today. Be it known that Cardio is managing Young Gradwell, who has won a couple of Boston starts. He first polished off Charley Parker and was then awarded a decision over George Brown. This writer was of the opinion that Brown won, but as Gradwell is prepared to battle the New Yorker again he must be given credit for having confidence in his own ability to deliver.

The boxing game has been picking up throughout the country since Jack Dempsey and Georges Carpentier settled their little affair. The sport was flat in Boston prior to the big mill, but since then the two shows held here by the Arena A. C. have gone over big. The Sherlin-Latzo bout was a real test, as it was staged under adverse weather conditions.

MORAN PICKS BRAVES TO WIN PENNANT

There is a lot of comment flying around baseball circles about the latest stab the Giants have made to strengthen up. The trading of "Irish" Meusel from the Phils to New York is one of those things that don't do the game a bit of good. It brings up the old cry of the rich teams buying the pennant, and it also causes dissatisfaction among the players in general.

HIGH PRICED SPORT AND THE FAN

The worm will turn.

The sport fan—baseball—boxing—bike—football and hockey—who has followed his favorite pastime year in and year out without complaint—digging deeper into his jeans each season—has balked.

The high price of sports has nearly bankrupted the average fan and the various branches of outdoor and indoor athletics are suffering by a falling off in attendances as a result.

Just at this season of the year every red-blooded man, woman and child is a baseball fan, but with the prevailing high prices hundreds are denied the right to get out and enjoy the great American game.

The same condition holds good in other branches of sport, especially the fight game, which seems to have fallen flat, but baseball is the chief offender as far as the high prices are concerned.

The men who spend all their time watching the turnstiles at the various ball parks will have to give the fans on the outside a look in very soon or take a cut in their pocketbooks—where it hurts them most.

Give the loyal fan a square deal. He was on the job with his coin in his hand when baseball needed him and it is only right and proper that prices come down to where they belong.

P. S. Mr. Magnate—Watch out for the Twilight League.

14-YEAR-OLD BOY IS BIG WINNER IN FRANCE

By WILL COOK.

Paris, July 27.—The most important part of the horse racing program in France [illegible] jockeys [illegible] of the winning [illegible] keenly contested.

At the [illegible] of St. Louis, heads the list, with fifty winning mounts out of a possible 300. He is closely followed by Matt Mac[illegible]

* * *

This year, however, the roles may be changed, for several promising young French boys have come to the limelight in flat racing. Undoubtedly the best of the group is little Jean Lepinte, fourteen years old. He stands barely four feet high and weighs a little under sixty pounds.

* * *

Jean, as most people of the tracks call him, was born at Maisons Laffitte, near Paris, one of the big centres of horse racing and training in France. His father was a bricklayer and was not at all interested in horse racing. His young son, [illegible] horses a [illegible]

* * *

He was [illegible] years when he could be seen out on the training tracks carefully watching the preparation of horses for big [illegible] from the tracks and [illegible] for his small legs stable [illegible] of the horses.

* * *

Nothing [illegible] and one day he [illegible] would try his hand [illegible] for [illegible] to [illegible]

* * *

When ten years old Jean told his father and mother that the time had come for him to quit school and go out in the world and work for his living. Receiving his parents' consent Lepinte one morning on the way back from the tracks waylaid George Lawrence, one of the oldest British trainers in this country.

* * *

Point blank Jean asked Lawrence for a job and said he could soon learn to ride horses as the other boys did. Lawrence at first smiled, but in view of the boy's insistence told him to come round to the stable next morning.

* * *

He was an early arrival at the stable, but created something of a sensation when he revealed himself [illegible]

* * *

He only received coarse laughs [illegible] and began to feel unhappy, particularly when the head [illegible] showed up and gave Jean a huge wooden fork and told him to get busy and clear up the boxes once the horses were out.

* * *

But manfully he undertook the task and he had his reward a few days [illegible] when he was put up on a horse [illegible] lessons. He learned his job very rapidly and very soon afterward he was seen out in the trials.

* * *

A little later Lawrence had reason [illegible] one his next running horse. Lawrence, as a good trainer, watched the work of his staff, as well as that of [illegible]

* * *

[illegible] jockeys.

* * *

Given his chance, Lepinte proved his value, for his first ride was his first winner, and throughout the race he showed a lot of good judgment, never allowing himself to get too much mixed up in a big group and always making for the rail on entering the home stretch.

* * *

His first appearance created a sensation, however, owing to his height and weight. Whereas most jockeys wear close-fitting tunics, Lepinte's was so big that it practically smothered him. So heavy was his saddle—in order to make up the weight—that he could not carry it, and there were many people who during the race shouted themselves hoarse, believing a [illegible]key had fallen off.

Robert W. Chambers' Famous Story THE STREETS OF ASCALON Illustrated by Charles Dana Gibson

The Story of a Beautiful Girl and the Man for Whom She Made a Great Sacrifice

A Spirited and Swiftly Moving Romance of Hearts and High Society, by the Greatest Living Master of Fiction

Who's Who in "The Streets of Ascalon"

STRELSA LEEDS—A charming young widow, who comes to New York and is sponsored by one of the leaders of society.

RICHARD QUARREN—A gifted young idler, who falls in love with Strelsa.

LANGLY SPROWL—A multi-millionaire, who has determined to marry Strelsa, and who has explained his unsavory past to her by a seemingly frank talk.

SIR CHARLES MALLISON—A rich Englishman, who has long hoped to win Strelsa's heart.

MARY LEDWITH—Who, betrayed by Sprowl, at last sees the good in Chester Ledwith, the husband she tossed aside.

THE EARL OF DANKMERE—Who brings over a lot of family pictures and incidentally starts Quarren on the road to usefulness.

MOLLY WYCHERLY—A great friend of Strelsa's, who breaks to Quarren the news that the young widow has lost all her money.

MRS. SPROWL—A Fifth avenue dowager, who undertakes a matrimonial campaign for Strelsa, hoping to marry her to Sir Charles Mallison.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED.

Dick Quarren, society idler and spendthrift, but clever and good looking, has fallen desperately in love with Strelsa Leeds. She has had one unfortunate matrimonial experience, and since her advent into New York high society has admirers by the score. Quarren meets her first at a masked ball given by Molly Wycherly, wins an hour out of her life on a wager and refrains from kissing her, as he tells her he is eager to do. She tells him there can be nothing serious between them, but she asks him to always think well of her. She bids him [illegible] for two weeks. Upon her return she takes tea with Mrs. Sprowl, who urges her to marry Sir Charles Mallison. Mrs. Sprowl lectures Quarren for dropping out of [illegible]. The Dankmere galleries are opened and Quarren takes a few days off at Witch-Hollow. Strelsa tells him she is to marry Langly Sprowl. He tells her that he loves her. The Dankmere galleries [illegible] opened and Quarren [illegible] her and [illegible] a visit to [illegible] Hollow [illegible] tiles to him the story of her marriage to Leeds.

"No."

"Yes," she said wearily, "it was a bad dream—my mother, others— [illegible] the Hawaiian Islands [illegible]

"Then—the two years began."

After a long while she said again: "That was the real nightmare. I passed through the depths as in a trance. There was nothing [illegible], not even hell . . . We traveled in Europe, Africa and India for two years. . . . I scarcely re[illegible] object. And then—that happened." [illegible] know, dear."

[illegible] shudder passed over her.

A Very Close Bond.

"[illegible] told you," she whispered—"[illegible] you at last. Shall I tell [illegible] more?"

"[illegible] unless"——

"[illegible] don't know whether I want to [illegible] the gendarmes—and that terrible woman who screamed when they touched her with the handcuffs—and how ill I was"——

She had begun to tremble so perceptibly that Quarren's arm tightened around her; and presently she became limp and motionless.

"This—what I have told you—is a very close bond between us, isn't it?" she said.

"Very close, Strelsa."

"Was I much to blame?"

"No."

"How much?"

"You should have left him long before."

"Why, he was my husband! I had made a contract; I had to keep it and make the best of it."

"Is that your idea?"

"That was all I could see to do about it."

"Don't you believe in divorce?"

"Yes; but I thought he'd be killed; I thought he was a little insane. If he'd been well mentally and merely cruel and brutal I would have left him. But one cannot abandon a helpless person."

"Every word you utter," he said, "forges a new link in my love for you."

"You don't mean—love?"

"We mean the same I think—differing only in degree."

"Thank you. That is nice of you."

He nodded, smiling to himself; then, graver:

"Is your little fortune quite gone, Strelsa?"

"All gone—all of it."

"I see. . . . And something [illegible]"

"You know it has. . . . And I'm old before my time—tired, worn out. I can't work—I have no heart, no courage. My heart and strength were burnt out; I haven't the will to struggle; I have no capacity to endure. What am I to do?"

"Not what you plan to do!"

"Why not? As long as I need help—and the best is offered"——

"Wouldn't you take less—and me?"

"Oh, Rix! I couldn't use you!"

She turned and looked up at him, blushed, and disengaged herself from his arm.

"I—I—you are my friend. I couldn't do that. I have nothing to give anybody—not even you." She smiled tremulously—"And I suspect that as far as your fortune is concerned, you can offer me little more . . . . But it's sweet of you. You are generous, having so little and wishing to share it with me"——

"Could you wait for me, Strelsa?"

"Wait? You mean until you become wealthy? Why, you dear boy, how can I?—even if it were a certainty."

"Can't you hold on for a couple of years?"

"Please tell me how? Why, I can't even pay my attorneys until I sell my house."

A Moment of Silence

He bit his lip and frowned at the sunlit water.

"Besides," she said, "I haven't anything to offer you that I haven't already given you"——

"I ask no more."

"Oh, but you do!"

"No, I only want what you want, Strelsa—only what you have to offer of your own accord."

They fell silent, leaning forward on their knees, eyes absent, remote.

"I don't see how it can be done, do you?" she said.

"If you could wait"——

"But, Rix—I've told him that I would marry him."

"Does that count?"

"Yes—I don't know. I don't know how dishonest I might be. . . . I don't know what is going to happen. I'm so poor, Rix—you don't realize—and I'm tired and sad—old before my time—perplexed, burnt out"——

She rested her head on one slender curved hand and closed her eyes. After a while she opened them with a weary smile.

"I'll try to think—after you are gone. . . . What time does your train leave?"

He glanced at his watch and rose; and she sprang up, too.

"Have I kept you too long?"

"No; I can make it. We'll have to walk rather fast"——

"I'd rather you left me here."

"Would you? Then—good-bye."

"Good-bye . . . . Will you come up again?"

"I'll try."

"Shall we write?"

"Will you?"

"Yes. I have so much to say now that you are going. I am glad you came. I am glad I told you everything. Please believe that my heart is enlisted in your new enterprise; that I pray for your success and welfare and happiness. Will you always remember that?"

"Yes, dear."

"Then—"I mustn't keep you a moment longer. Good bye."

They stood a moment, neither stirring; then he put his arms about her; she touched his shoulder once more, lightly with her cheek—a second's contact; then he kissed her clasped hands and was gone.

Arrived in Town

Quarren arrived in town about twilight. Taxis were no longer for him nor he for them. Suit case and walking stick in hand, he started up Lexington avenue still excited and exhilarated from his leave-taking with Strelsa. An almost imperceptible fragrance seemed to accompany him, freshening the air around him in the shabby streets of Ascalon; the heat-cursed city grew cooler, sweeter for her memory.

Through the avenue's lamp-lit dusk passed the pale ghosts of Gath and the phantoms of the Philistines, and he thought their shadowy forms moved less wearily; and that strange faces looked less wanly at him as they grew out of the night—"clothed in scarlet and ornaments of gold"—and dissolved again into darkness.

Still thrilled, almost buoyant, he walked on, passing the high-piled masonry of the branch postoffice and the Central Palace on his left. Against high stars the twin power house chimneys stood outlined in steel; on the right endless blocks of brownstone dwellings stretched northward, some already converted into shops where print-sellers, dealers in old books, and here and there antiquaries, had constructed show windows.

Firemen lounged outside the Eighth Battalion quarters; here and there a grocer's or wineseller's windows remained illuminated where those who were neither well-to-do nor very poor passed to and fro with little packages which seemed a burden under the sultry skies.

At last, ahead, the pseudo-Oriental towers of a synagogue varied the flat skyline, and a moment later he could see the New Thought Laundry, the Tonsorial Drawing Rooms, the undertaker's discreetly illuminated windows, and finally the bay windows of his own recent real estate office, now transmogrified into the Dankmere Galleries of Old Masters, Fayre & Quarren, proprietors.

The windows appeared to be brilliantly illuminated behind the drawn curtains, and Quarren, surprised and vexed, concluded that the little Englishman was again entertaining. So it perplexed and astonished him to find the Earl sitting on the front steps, his straw hat on the back of his head, smoking. At the same moment from within the house a confused and indescribable murmur was wafted to his ears as though many people were applauding.

A Strange Audience

"What on earth is going on inside?" he asked, bewildered.

"You told me over the telephone that Karl Westguard might have the gallery for this evening," said the Englishman calmly. "So I let him have it."

"What did he want of it? Who has he got in there?" demanded Quarren as another ripple of applause sounded from within.

Dankmere thought a moment; "I really don't know the audience, Quarren — they're not a very fragrant lot."

"What audience. Who are they."

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

THE HIGHER VISION

A STORY OF A NURSE'S AWAKENING

By A. Maria Crawford

THE nurses on night duty in Ward F were mutinous. Three of them were plotting when Miss Sangfield, the [illegible] quietly into the ward.

"Keep the sheets on the beds of your restless patients tied down tight," she [illegible] presently. "They [illegible] comfortable."

The sudden anger of the girl flared into a [illegible] answer. "We've never [illegible] down here in this ward, Miss Sangfield. They are [illegible] of them [illegible] fights and street brawls."

Need Attention

"Then they need attention because of their previous lack of it. Give them kind service! You will see how quickly [illegible]"

Little flaxen-[illegible] den, who had a [illegible] madonna, spoke up in defence. "I think [illegible] sight of the individual. Each one is simply a case to nurse back to health. That's our business of life. If I were a [illegible] I would suffer just as much as if I were rich, wouldn't I?"

"But you wouldn't expect as much?"

"I would need kindness and care even more. After all, there's something to what she says. I'm going to try out her theory." The girl moved quickly toward a hard case where a huge figure moved, awkwardly trying to turn over. "Here, let me help you? I expect you're tired of this old cot, aren't you? How would some iced orange juice taste right now?"

And that was the first night since his coming that he did not keep the other patients awake with his loud groans and curses.

The next morning the rebellious nurse called to another: "Who's that in 42 working with that wizened looking baby whose mother died last week? I think it would be better to let it die, too."

"Look who is feeding it, at this time of the day, too," whispered Eleanor softly. "It's Miss Sangfield herself. Do you suppose she's stayed with the kid all night?"

The sneering nurse stepped to the door. "Want me to stay on here until you go to breakfast and chapel, Miss Sangfield?" she asked suddenly. "You must be worn out, [illegible] I [illegible] have kept the baby down in my ward."

Anecdotes of the Famous

The world's geniuses had their eccentricities in the manner of doing their work. For instance, Schiller put his feet in ice while he sat in a room filled with the odor of bad apples. Milton buried his head in cushions and blankets. Rousseau preferred to have the sun beating on his head, while Shelley wrote with his head close to the fire.

Quite a number of people have discovered the advantages of thinking in bed; but of the intellectual giants who always preferred this method, Descartes and Leibnitz are noteworthy.

Lecky, the historian, modified the method, he used to kneel upon a specially constructed sofa and write upon the head of it, so that the line between head and heart was horizontal and the blood flow thereby aided. The same result was secured more comfortably by Swinburne, who used to write while lying on the floor.

In contrast to these, Victor Hugo always stood upright at his desk. Herbert Spencer used to utilize physical exercise, perhaps the best method of all. After rowing, or playing with a ball for a time he would sit down and dictate. Later he would try more exercise and so on.

How to Fight Measles

By Brice Belden, M. D.

MEASLES is a disease so common among children that it has come to be looked upon in many cases with indifference, while scarlet fever with fewer fatalities to its credit is looked upon with much greater concern. Greater care is taken to avoid the more deadly disease (scarlet fever), and it is not allowed to spread so far, while a large death rate results from the milder disease (measles) because it has been regarded by parents with comparative [illegible].

As in the case of other infectious diseases, isolation is the first important step when measles appears. The physician then makes a report of the case to the health authorities and a placard is placed on the door of the house in order that those going in and out may know that there is danger of infection in the neighborhood and take precautions accordingly for the sake of other children.

There is no preventive antitoxin or vaccine for measles as there is for several of the other infectious diseases, including diphtheria and typhoid.

Children should be well fed and cared for in order to keep up their resistance to infection by the common children's diseases to which they are exposed. It is in school particularly that they come into contact with other children who are infected, and good health is one of the best protections they can have.

If the disease is contracted the healthy child has the best equipment for fighting it, and his convalescence will be quicker than that of the poorly nourished child. Deaths from measles are usually the result of complications, and the child with a high resistance is not likely to succumb to other diseases during his illness.

She Was On the Job

They met at a dance and, after a few turns together sat down.

Silence followed.

He looked at her, and she looked at him.

More silence.

Then at last George asked:

"Daisy, will you be my"—

"Oh, George," cried Daisy, "this is so sudden! Give me a little time"——

"Partner for the next dance," concluded George.

"To get my breath back," also continued Daisy between puffs. "I haven't quite recovered from the last jazz yet."

As a Woman Thinketh

BY HELEN ROWLAND

Copyright 1921, by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

BETTY, dear—
Thank you for your sweet invitation—
And of course I'm longing to see you again!
And I have tempting visions of your lovely, cool guest room, with its four poster bed and its green silk curtains, and its enchanting view!
BUT—
If it's like MOST guest rooms,
I suspect that it contains the "hardest mattress," which nobody in the family will sleep on,
And the chiffonier with the drawers that stick in damp weather,
And the uncomfortable little rocker that tilts the wrong way,
And the frowsy family portraits that you dared not discard—
And all that!
And besides
I'm going away to ESCAPE!
I'm going, Betty, going—
To a NICE, BIG, EXPENSIVE HOTEL!
I'm going where I can totter to the telephone in the morning, and order up my berries and cream and honey and hot waffles,
And send them BACK again (if they are NOT hot),
Without the fear that the cook will leave;
Where I'll have my own snowy bathroom, with seven towels a day, and no thought of the laundry bills,
And where I can escape the before-breakfast struggle for the cold shower and the hot water and the family tooth paste,
And may never know the sweet renunciation of brushing my teeth under the kitchen faucet!
Where I can curl my hair AFTER breakfast, and appear "all set" in a fluffy white frock at 11 o'clock.
Where the sound of the telephone won't mean a thing in the world to me!
And I won't care whether the curtains are fresh, or the windows need washing, or the cat has been fed,
Or the ferns need water, or the moths are getting into the rugs—
Or NOT!
In short—
Where my SOUL will be at peace for six long weeks!
And—oh, of course, I love my home, and the sweet home life, and my husband—and all that!
But I MUST escape from them, and come up for air every now and then.
For heaven itself would get on a woman's nerves,
If she were compelled to keep playing the celestial harp, and polishing the golden stairs, and dusting the stars, and scouring the golden streets, and shining the family halos,
Every minute of the day forever and ever!
And it's all very well for a man to say that "his home is his heaven";
But there are times when every married woman hopes, dreams and suspects
That Paradise will be a lot more like a HOTEL!

BOSTON AMERICAN COOK BOOK

Victory Hash

A brisket piece of corned beef makes the best hash. Cook it long enough so the brisket fat will be well done. Four cups chopped cold potatoes, 1 cup brisket fat chopped fine, 2 cups lean corned beef chopped, ½ cup chopped onions, ¼ cup chopped green peppers leaving out the seeds, 1 teaspoonful sugar, small piece of butter, salt to taste. Use enough water to moisten. Cook all together long enough to cook onion, but not long enough to make mushy. Chopped beets, carrots and cabbage can be used if one likes the flavor. Hash is much better chopped instead of being ground.

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

ROMANCE OF NEWLY WEDDED LIFE

By Ann Lisle

Copyright, 1921, by King Feature Syndicate, Inc.

"YOU think Dick West shot Neal because he was jealous; because he remembers the time when he had you in his power for a little while, don't you?" I probed.

Phoebe shut her eyes spasmodically for reply.

"And you think that if you'd told Neal about your glimpse of West on the street things would have been different, don't you?"

"Yes," whispered Phoebe forlornly.

"You're wrong, dear," I said quietly. "Dick West thinks you were a helpless puppet in my hands. He doesn't hate you at all. He didn't make any effort to speak to you when he saw you on the street that day, did he? He didn't show any sign of still keeping up interest in you? I know you won't resent these questions, dear, or think they belittle you or your charm. For the little girl who loves my Neal wouldn't feel complimented by Dick West's fondness for her—she'd feel soiled."

"That's just it, Anne," moaned Phoebe. "I feel ashamed to think I ever liked him at all, or let him—get to care for me. When I saw him, I was so mortified that I wanted to run away. I started to cross the street to avoid him and then I realized that he hadn't seen me. He was going along with his coat collar turned up and his whole attention focussed on the man with him. So I just crept along like a little mouse and didn't make a single abrupt motion to attract his attention."

Anne Puts Questions

"Phoebe, was this a cold day?" I asked. "Try to remember."

"What a funny question!" replied Phoebe. "But it wasn't cold at all during the day. Surely you remember, for that's how you came to catch cold when it turned to freeze in the evening."

"Yet Dick West's coat collar was turned up," I said slowly. "And he was absorbed in the man with him as you went by. Don't you see, he was trying to avoid you? He's ashamed to face you. And that isn't the sort of emotion that would drive him into a quarrel with Neal on your account, is it?"

"I suppose not," agreed Phoebe, lifting her little pansy face hopefully.

"His hatred for Jim and me wouldn't account for it either," I said.

"Then you don't think it was Dick West?" asked Phoebe, with a certain amount of relief.

"I don't know," I replied. "I can't match things up, but I'm sure there's just a thread or two missing to make the pattern clear. Did you notice the man with Dick West? Was there anything odd about him?"

"He was a funny, little, stooped old man."

"A little, stooped old man?" I repeated after her.

A knock at the door interrupted us.

Critical Point

At the most critical point of my interview with Phoebe the waiter came bringing our dinner tray. While he was still shaking out napkins and uncovering dishes, Nurse Whitcomb returned announcing that she'd left the others drinking their "demmi tasseys" and had come up to see how her boy was doing. Then she popped into the bedroom, so I was free to resume my discussion with Phoebe.

"Phoebikins, before we drop the unpleasant subject of Dick West can you tell me where it was you saw him—and the stooped little old man?" I asked.

"Let's see," returned Phoebe, slowly. "I'd just been over to the Avenue for a fitting and had crossed the city to get some theatre tickets for Jeanie. And when I first saw the two men they were coming out of that hotel where Father Andrews was staying."

"A stooped little old man—the hotel where Father Andrews was staying—Dick West," I mumbled with sinking heart.

To Be Continued.

Hints for the Household

For paintwork and varnished woodwork bran is invaluable. Colored goods usually fade when washed, but if washed in bran water they will not lose their color. It is excellent also as a scalp cleanser, making the hair glossy. Used instead of soap, it softens and whitens the hands. To prepare bran water, fill a small bag with bran, place in a bowl and cover with boiling water.

* * *

Turpentine is useful for removing paint stains. Apply the turpentine with a piece of rag, and if the stain is obstinate use a little ammonia as well.

* * *

If Brussels rug persists in rolling up at the edges, turn it over and apply a good coat of glue. Let it dry before turning, and there will not be any more trouble.

* * *

For a cold on the chest, a flannel rag wrung out in boiling water and sprinkled with turpentine, laid on the chest, gives the greatest relief.

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. Forbes

Banks are popularly supposed to be gold mines. We always think of them as making enormous profits. The owner of bank shares is usually thought of as something of a plutocrat.

* * *

We wonder sometimes how banks make their money. We know that they are supposed to charge only the legal rate for the funds they lend, and it is not clear to all of us how, this being so, they can pay dividends of 10, 20, 30, 40 or even 50 per cent.—this last rate has been paid for many years by the First National Bank of New York, under the masterly guiding hand of George F. Baker, now the dean of American National Banks.

* * *

A reader of this column, having asked pointed questions on this subject, I asked one of the ablest of New York's younger school of bankers, Vice-President Sisson of the Guaranty Trust Company, to supply the answer. And he has.

Here is the reader's inquiry:

"Ordinarily I consider myself a fair mathematician, but I have just had an argument with my local banker, who gives me an idea that I would certainly like to see your able pen explain for the good of the country. Two Philadelphia banks have just declared 34 per cent. and 36 per cent. dividends. I asked this banker, how can banks pay such dividends when industry is flat and is passing dividends? I evidently hit a raw spot. He says that such earnings are legal. Legal they may be, but are they economic? When water has reached a level it has no potential energy.

"A bank on financial analysis merely uses depositors' money, and in Pennsylvania is limited to 6 per cent. return per annum. How, then, at 6 per cent. per annum, can 34 per cent. be earned on loaned money? This banker says it is on turnovers, they making four to as high as twelve turns per annum. That is O. K., but with a 6 per cent. return per annum, how it can grow to 34 per cent. is not understood by me, and I believe by a vast number of persons in this country. If there were 6 per cent. profit on each deal the thing would work out, but on 6 per cent. per annum, I cannot see it, for that is at the rate of ½ of 1 per cent. per month, which is charged on a thirty-day note, for example.

"Will you please explain this?"

* * *

Mr. Sisson furnishes this reply:

"Your correspondent is apparently under a misapprehension regarding the various features of the banking business which can be simply explained.

"A bank's dividends are not based upon its deposits but upon its investment in stock, and, whereas there may be a 6 per cent. limit placed upon loans, it is quite possible that a bank might make profits out of its loanable funds which would insure a much larger yield upon its stock. Furthermore, in looking at the rate of dividends paid by a bank, the average person loses sight of the stockholders' money invested in the surplus and undivided profits accounts of the banks. While the two banks mentioned declared dividends at the rate of 34 per cent and 36 per cent. it may have been at only 6 per cent. or 8 per cent. of the money actually invested.

* * *

"For instance, our own company has been paying 20 per cent. dividends upon its capital stock, but the real invested funds of the stockholders include its capital, surplus, and undivided profits of $55,000,000 and upon that sum the rate paid is only 9 per cent. plus upon the money which the stockholders have invested in the business.

* * *

"It is necessary, in order that a proper margin of safety shall be provided for depositors, that an adequate surplus and undivided profits account be maintained. In the handling of commercial business banks must inevitably take losses at times, and an adequate surplus account must be carried. While there is no fixed percentage, the general practice of the banking business is that capital, surplus and undivided profits should be about 10 per cent. of the deposits.

* * *

"Here, for instance is an illustration showing how a bank can pay 20 per cent. or 30 per cent dividends upon its stock without charging over 6 per cent. interest on its loans:

Cash held for reserve	$ 260,000
Loans, etc.	1,950,000
Totals	$2,210,000
Capital	$ 100,000
Surplus	100,000
Undivided profits	10,000
Totals	$ 210,000
Deposits	$2,000,000
Total	$2,210,000
Earnings—
Interest on loans at 6 per cent.	$ 117,000
Interest paid on deposits	40,000
Total	$ 77,000
Expenses and taxes	$ 55,000
Net earnings	22,000
Dividends paid at 20 per cent. equal to 9.54 per cent. on stockholders' money invested	20,000

"Under the existing business scheme business cannot be conducted without banks, and stockholders must have assurance of a reasonably profitable rate over the risks of loss or they will not invest in banks. In a period of business stress there is even greater reason for banks to add to their surplus and pay regular dividends because of the element of confidence which it is so necessary to establish at such a time. Any indication such as the passing of dividends or too little provision for protection might be taken as proof by an unreasoning public of weakness and precipitate runs.

"The wisdom of our banking institutions accumulating earnings during a period of booming business and high interest rates such as we have passed through has been clearly proven by the existing necessity on the part of these same institutions to make substantial charge offs for losses incurred in the subsequent period of business reaction.

* * *

"Bank stocks, for the most part, are sold for prices which net only a conservative return to the investor, and I do not believe it can be shown that bank stockholders have profited unduly from their investments or perhaps even proportionately with other lines of business."

* * *

Incidentally, the banking field is wide open for all who may care to enter it. Hundreds of new banks are authorized by the Federal government and State governments every year.

Competition in banking is quite as keen in the larger centres as the competition in most lines. It is not enough for a bank to issue plenty of capital stock. Confidence has to be earned. Confidence in a financial institution cannot be developed over night. Nor can it be developed by methods savoring of gouging.

This column is prompted by a spirit of fair play.

UNITED DRUG IN A BAD PRICE BREAK

Drops More Than 20 Points to a Record Low; Several Equipments Sag

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks closed irregular in New York, although there was a reactionary tendency toward the end. Pressure upon United Drug relaxed before the finish and it got several points above its lowest. At the bottom it was off more than twenty. Among strong issues were Houston Oil, Crucible, General Asphalt and Coca Cola, they showing from one to more than two-point gains. Both losses and gains were small as a rule.

The last quotation for call money was the lowest since November 3, 1919. The money supply exceeded borrowing demand by millions of dollars.

The drive against United Drug was accompanied by rumors that directors might take unfavorable dividend action at the next meeting. The assignment of President Louis K. Liggett was a shock to financial districts and helped depress United Drug issues. Pressed Steel Car dropped more than eight points and Railway Steel Springs more than six. Pullman and Car and Foundry were also weak. Call loans renewed at 5 per cent. and the rate was 4½ subsequently. In the foreign exchange market lire slumped to its lowest since April. This was attributed to reports of labor trouble in Italy.

IRREGULAR AT OPENING.

In the case of most stocks initial price changes were small and the market had an irregular opening. It was quiet also at the start. United Drug continued under pressure, selling at its lowest in four years and receding about nine points within a few minutes. It had sagged eighteen so far this week. The first preferred issue of this corporation sold at a record low. So did the common. Leather issues weakened. This was largely on account of the latest statement by Central Leather, which also sold at a record low for preferred. U. S. Steel opened with a small gain despite a deficit of $4,571,668 for the June quarter. Afterwards it went below its first figure of the morning. But its poor showing as regards earnings has been discounted. Other steels changed but little. Oils were firm, with Pacific Oil making the largest gain. There was a drive against Famous Players, it dropping three points quickly. International Harvester was also attacked by bears and soon lost more than its opening gain. At the end of an hour the market was rather weak.

RAILS DID NOT RESPOND.

Rails made no response to President Harding's suggestion as to what Congress should do in regard to the settlement of the claims of carriers against the government. Poor earnings by industrials has been emphasized by more gloomy reports by leading companies and the effect has been felt by the whole list. As regards the weakness of United Drug, one statement from New York reads: "All the bear arguments in connection with the stock were contained in the notice in connection with the stockholders' meeting to approve the issue of $20,000,000 new stock, that increase being approved by the stockholders on June 15. It was generally understood that the control of the property of the company was lodged in two Stock Exchange firms. Sales of the stock yesterday for delivery in sixty days at four points below the price of the stock in the regular way attracted attention to an expectation that either new stock will come on the market in that period or that pool holdings will be released in the interval."

Wall Street Briefs

According to the National Association of Manufacturers, this country's exports for the June fiscal year totaled $6,519,000,000, and decreased 20 per cent. as compared with the preceding year.

The 1920 mineral output of South Africa is estimated £55,194,204, a gain of £4,352,709 over the preceding twelve months.

The $4,000,000 Detroit United Railway 8 per cent. bonds offered by Dillon, Read & Co. have been sold and the books closed.

It is stated that bankers have practically agreed to renew the $18,000,000 acceptance credit granted to Cuba Cane Sugar Corporation. The bills mature August 1 and 17.

Application has been made by the International Cement Corporation to the New York Stock Exchange for the listing of 400,000 shares of capital stock without nominal or par value.

The Seattle municipal street railway was operated at a loss of $987,563 for the year.

The special meeting of Central Sugar Corporation stockholders, called to authorize $1,000,000 mortgage bonds, has been again adjourned for one week.

UTILITY BONDS MAY DELUDE, SAYS EVANS

Points Out That While They Are "Coming Back," There Are Still Adverse Conditions

By C. B. EVANS.

Chicago, July 27.—The distinctive thing in this city is the demand for bonds. Our quota on any new issue is promptly snapped up.

The notes of the Columbia Gas & Electric Company which controls the service for Cincinnati and suburbs, amounting to $6,000,000, could be entirely disposed of in Chicago, judging from applications already in. Bonds, especially of railroad companies heretofore offered to the public, have advanced materially of late and this city bears its part in the performance.

UTILITIES COMING BACK.

The preference for railroad issues among the conservative classes has been markedly sharpened by the expectation of immediate help to the roads from the government. As to all bonds the public seems eager to get in before a decline in interest rates sends them any higher. In regard to one specialty in the bond line the following statement by an authority in the very heart of expertdom is interesting:

"Statements have been made recently that the utilities after having had a hard time of it for several years, are coming back strong, and in the depression in the industrials are showing among the best with respect to ability to pay interest and dividends.

MANY IN BAD SHAPE.

"There is some truth in the assertion but, as the boys say, we ought not to 'kid ourselves.' There are a great many utilities and especially street and interurban railways that are in bad shape, if not with respect to operating income, with reference to their ability to raise new capital to make extensions.

"The condition is illustrated in an advertisement for the sale of $4,000,000 first mortgage collateral eight per cent sinking fund gold bonds, payable in twenty years and callable at 107½ per cent. These bonds are secured on a little more than $4,000,000 underlying closed first mortgage bonds covering the property, the depreciated value of which was fixed by the state utility commission at more than $11,000,000. The net earnings of the property show that the interest on the bonds will be earned three times.

NEEDED THE MONEY.

"It is obvious that this company is pledging its crown jewels, and the money it probably required to take up an existing indebtedness and will not be used for extending the property.

"It is evident when these bonds are sold that the corporation will have exhausted its ability to borrow, and that it must for years rely on net income over expenses and dividends to make extensions to the property.

"There seems to be no hope in this direction, however, because while the gross revenue increased from $16,000,000 in 1916 to $29,000,000 in 1920 the net earnings were $4,600,000 in 1916 and only $4,000,000 in 1920. In other words, the company did not make as much money by $600,000 in 1920 as in 1916, while its gross earnings more than doubled. The increase in the gross was eaten up by higher costs of operation.

HIGH INTEREST RATE.

"Note also that the company is committing itself to a very high rate of interest for a long period, and is selling the bonds below par.

"This company points out that it is under the jurisdiction of the State Utilities Commission. It is a foregone conclusion that it has appealed to that commission for higher rates and evidently has not been able to get all that it asked for. The operating figures are a reflection on the work of the Public Utilities Commission.

"This particular case is of a type of which there are many hundreds all over the country. It does not seem to be realized that one of the most useful utilities in the country, the poor man's only means of transportation, is being destroyed by politicians and incompetent public utility commissions, or commissioners too spineless to give the utility the help it must have to live.

"The reports that the utilities are all right are premature, and are not only lulling us to sleep but are giving utility commissions in several States an excuse for still failing to act on higher rates for utilities, applications for which have been before them for months."

Corporation Reports

The Beaver Valley Traction Company and Pittsburgh & Beaver Street Railway Co. report for June $6,037 decrease in gross earnings and $4,290 deficit after taxes.

For the June quarter the Central Leather Company reports deficit after charges and Federal taxes of $6,264,192 against a deficit after preferred dividends in the preceding quarter of $4,334,311 and deficit in the corresponding quarter of 1920 after charges, taxes and preferred dividends of $2,979,079.

Duluth & Iron Range reports 1920 net income after taxes and charges of $2,730,529 against $1,720,483 in 1919.

For the first half of 1921 the Owens Bottle Company reports net profit after taxes and charges of $1,147,568 against $2,505,117 in the corresponding period of 1920.

In 1920 the New York & Honduras Rosario Mining Co. produced $1,569,000 silver and gold compared with $2,115,000 in 1919. The decrease was due to the fall in the price of silver.

The Standard Chemical Company reports for the fifteen months ended March 31 profits of $340,327, and a deficit of $166,297.

The Philadelphia Company reports for June gross earnings $63,039, decrease $56,013, and net after taxes $18,104, decrease $67,270.

Cold Storage Food

On the first of this month there were 53,315,370 pounds of food in cold storage in Massachusetts, according to a report by Herman C. Lythgoe, director of the food and drug division of the Massachusetts Department of Health. Egg storage has now reached its height and butter storage nearly so. Holdings of lamb are the lowest in the last eleven months, and the beef holdings are lowest for nine. Pork storage is 1,500,000 pounds less than the maximum.

TRADING STILL STAGNANT IN BOSTON

Local Market Opens Firm, but Reacts a Little; Curb Becomes Irregular

At the outset most active issues on the Boston list opened higher or were unchanged but pressure in New York soon cast a shadow upon the local exchange. Within an hour there was slight recessional. Trading was too dull to permit it to appear pronounced. United Drug dropped fifteen points on one sale. The John T. Connor stock sold at its lowest for the year. American Telephone gained a trifle. American Pneumatic issues were unusually active, the common selling unchanged and the preferred advancing 1¾ before suffering a reaction. Edison sold a couple of points higher. That was the decline of General Electric.

Small gains were made by Massachusetts Gas, Mohawk, Orpheum and Swift & Co. Issues to recede fractionally included Swift International, New Cornelia, Nipissing, American Woolen common, United Shoe and Boston & Maine.

CURB HAD FIRM START.

The Curb had a firm start, but its good tone was not long maintained. It soon became irregular. The most active issues were Boston & Montana and Eureka. Trading in this market was very dull. At the end of an hour Boston & Montana was up 2 cents at 72 cents, Imperial 1 cent at 8 cents and Verde Mines 3 cents at 21 cents. Among declines were Eureka 5 cents at 41 cents, Crystal 1 cent at 32 cents and Gadsden 4 cents at 41 cents. Alpha had lost a cent gain.

One order calls for $200,000 for the replacement of the South Boston gymnasium. Another appropriates $100,000 for the widening of Washington street, Roslindale, from Forest Hills square to Corinth street.

To install the first of the three pumps for the new high pressure water system there is an order for $120,000.

The fourth loan order calls for about $80,000 for alterations and additions of several firehouses.

The Mayor sent a message to the Council today asking for $40,000 out of taxation for the repaving of Post-office square and Congress street. The order was passed. The Council adjourned to August 15.

IPSWICH MAN NEAR DEATH IN QUICKSAND

Ipswich, July 27.—After lying up to his armpits in a bed of slimy quicksand in Pine Swamp, near here, Leonardo Goggitt, seventy years old, was rescued early today by a party that had been hunting him since early last night. Goggitt, who lives on High street, went into the swamp yesterday to pick berries. Shortly before midnight a squad of rescuers was sent out to look for him. He was found at dawn. A branch of a tree, which he had caught and lashed to his shoulders, had saved him from being entirely submerged. He will recover.

NEWS AND HAPPENINGS IN THE WORLD OF MOTION PICTURES

By FRIEDA DAVIS

SEEING Bert Lytell this week in "The Man Who," a Metro production adapted from a Saturday Evening Post story of Lloyd Osborne, brings up thoughts of the coming Lytell-Metro picture, "A Trip to Paradise."

"A Trip to Paradise," let us add, is nothing less than a screen version of Franz Molnar's "Liliom," in which Joseph Schildkraut and Eva Le Gallienne are scoring a distinct hit in New York. This play is something quite new and unusual, thereby giving just cause for success. Liliom, a crook, dies and goes to Heaven where he is tried for his life on earth. In the end he is given one day back on earth, where he visits his wife and little daughter.

On the screen, however, the producers are taking upon themselves the privilege to make any changes they see fit, regardless to all intents, of how they would strike the author, Molnar. For one thing, they changed the title, "A Trip to Paradise," sounding a bit Coney Islandish, whereas "Liliom" attracts at the first sound.

Not only that, but Liliom's call in Heaven will be but a temporary affair, since it will be the result of taking an anaesthetic, instead of death. And why? for a happy ending!

It seems strange that the producers shouldn't take into consideration the fact that the stage production has had a decided vogue, and without that same happy ending. Sometimes it would seem advisable to find out exactly what it is the public likes before making such changes in the name of "giving the public what it wants."

PRESTIGE AN EXPENSIVE THING

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS and Mary Pickford are again in the throes of a suit. Mildred Considine, a scenario writer, has sued them for $11,500 because her name was omitted from the screen as the author of Mary Pickford's newest picture, "Thru the Back Door."

Miss Considine declares that the result of the omission is "loss of prestige and humiliation."

MOORES ON LONG ISLAND.

THOUGH Niagara Falls is popularly supposed to figure as the setting for a honeymoon, Owen Moore and his young wife, Kathryn Perry, find it doesn't hold the proper appeal to a romantic soul. Therefore they are spending their honeymoon at their home at Douglaston Manor, Long Island, where golf is the order of the day.

Every day sees Owen Moore playing over the Garden City Course and teaching his bride the intricacies of the game.

NOT SUPERSTITIOUS.

WHATEVER else a script may call for in the line of action on a set or stage, the breaking of a mirror is the only thing at which an actor or actress determinedly balks. It stands in the same class with whistling in the dressing-rooms and other theatrical superstitions.

Elsie Ferguson, however, overcame her scruples long enough to break a mirror for a scene in her next picture, "Footlights," by Rita Weiman. This is one of the few times that a player has ever been known to do this, even in the interests of art, and the other players in the studio stood about in an ominous circle while the incident occurred.

ON BOBBED HAIR QUESTION.

NAZIMOVA

THOUGH Mr. O. K. Daniels of the Hartford Life Insurance Co declares that girls with bobbed hair are of no use in an office and though George Fitzmaurice, the director, refuses to give girls who have cut off their hair opportunities to play in his pictures, Nazimova comes forward with some pertinent remarks on the subject. Mme. Nazimova, by the way, wears her hair on the order of a Fiji Islander in her next production, "Camille."

"Whether it is the hair parted in the middle," she says, "and drawn over the ears or curled up on the back of the neck, or the bobbed hair bobbing all over the head, whether the skirts be hoopskirts or knee length, does not matter one whit. The glory of womanhood is never lost!"

Circus Story at Park Theatre

ANIMAL pictures are always exciting. When they are pictures taken in a lion's cage, they are doubly interesting. Gladys Walton's newest feature, "The Man Tamer," is quite one of the best things Universal has turned out in recent weeks. For the most part their stories have been a jumbled group of incidents. "The Man Tamer," however, is consecutive, at times exciting, and Miss Walton shows signs of real ability—signs that have frequently been lacking in her pictures.

Miss Walton is a lion tamer with the "greatest show on earth." Her father is hurt in the act, and she carries on alone against odds—the odds being the owner of the show. She is forced to resign and stays in a small city with the faithful Murphy and the "cats." There she meets the dissolute son of a millionaire, and is hired by the father to "tame" the son. She does, and, of course, falls in love with him, though in the picture he did nothing to deserve it.

With the exception of Priscilla Dean, Gladys Walton is the best actress in the Universal fold. She has the ability to get her feelings across to her audience, though at present in rather a limited way. She shows promise in this line and with more experience should become a player of real worth. The story has been worked out easily and with upheld interest, while the direction, particularly in the circus scenes, is very good.

Harry Carey's picture, "Desperate Trails," didn't fare so well. It is the usual Carey story, with the hero spending his entire time and energy getting other people out of difficulties and settling their affairs. A little of this sort of thing goes a long way with the average audience. One begins to wonder when Carey will have time to do something for himself.

In this case he obligingly goes to prison for a sixteen-year term to save the "brother" of the girl he thinks he loves. As he has already shown signs of loving still another girl, it seems like a far-fetched sacrifice. In prison he learns who the "brother" really is and breaks out of jail to kill him.

Of course, at this stage, the spectator begins to think that a murder is more damning than an undeserved prison sentence. Anyway, the sheriff tells the girl Carey really loves that he can get the latter a pardon and that he is certain to be acquitted anyway.

Irene Rich, who usually figures in Goldwyn productions, has been borrowed by Universal to play the leading role opposite Carey. She gives a very acceptable performance. Barbara La Marre, the vampire of the Douglas Fairbanks pictures, is convincing as the villainess.

JURY DISAGREE IN NEILAN CASE

SOME TIME ago we spoke of the suit that Mrs. Carrie Hutchison, scenario writer, brought against Marshall Neilan for $150,000. Mrs. Hutchison claimed that Neilan "filched" a story she had sent him but that he had returned as unavailable. The matter was brought into court and to decide whether the same story was used, the script was read to the jury, then they were shown the film, "Dinty."

Last Thursday the picture was shown and the jury was out for five hours. At the end of that time they still failed to agree as to whether the stories were the same and were dismissed.

NORMA TALMADGE'S newest film, "The Sign on the Door," the Channing Pollock stage success of last year, is said to be a remarkable production. Even the author is satisfied that nothing could have improved the screen version, and it's not easy to please the author. Miss Talmadge says that the play was in the scenario department of one of our largest movie companies for months, then was returned as unsuitable for screening!

Ford to Handle All Railroads

No, That's a Government Job

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

Fruit growers of Michigan ask President Harding to let Henry Ford run all the country's railways. They notice that on the railroad that Ford owns he has reduced rates and raised wages. On the other roads, privately owned, they have reduced WAGES and raised RATES.

However, the running of the railroads of this country is too big a job for any individual, or any group of individuals, and the private owners are learning it.

The government supplies funds, the roads are allowed to charge the public what they please, and they are still unable to make ends meet. Even Ford with his business ability could not manage the entire thing.

But the government ought to let Ford have Muscle Shoals, accepting gratefully his offer of one hundred and fifty millions cash, for the right to relieve the government of one of its big profiteering jobs, at a profit to the government.

Ford wants the plant in order to provide cheap fertilizer for farmers. This would mean increasing the world's food supply, and what is almost as important, making the farmer's life worth while.

Ford would DO that, spending any number of millions necessary, and he ought to have the chance.

Make Autos Obey 8-Ft. Law

Passengers Alighting From Street Cars Must Be Protected

The law requires all who operate automobiles to keep their machines not less than eight feet from a street railway car which is slowing down to stop, and when the car stops to keep their automobile not less than eight feet from the standing car.

A great many accidents are occurring through the neglect of automobilists to observe this rule and through the neglect of passengers on board the cars to look carefully on alighting lest some careless violator of the law be pushing by.

It would be well for the police to be on the lookout for this particular kind of carelessness and disobedience of the rules of the road. It might be a good plan if the police asked the public trustees of the Elevated and the Bay State to direct the operators of their cars to take down the number of the automobilists who disobey this rule and report to their superiors, who in turn could report to the police authorities.

Russia's Two Giants

FAMINE and CHOLERA. They Won't Listen to Theory

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

Famine and cholera threaten Russia, driving millions from the country toward the cities that have no food for them. This apparent ending of Bolshevism, certain individuals, including the more ignorant American financiers, welcome eagerly. They may not be so pleased with it, when they find what is to come AFTER Bolshevism. Russia is a very big power to be turned loose in the streets of the world without any driver. Two hundred millions of people, without direction, with famine, disease, and ten thousand individual brigand leaders driving them on, would not be pleasant neighbors for Western Europe. The nations that recently united with Russia to eliminate Germany may now find themselves uniting with Germany to hold back Russia.

The Bolshevist government, it is said, has appealed to the United States to help in the Russian famine, but this nation, not enthusiastic about it, suggests that Russia improve on its government, then come back again.

Sales Tax a Necessity

There is no escape from some kind of tax revision soon.

The income and excess profits taxes have fallen $1,000,000,000 below the estimates, and they are still falling.

The economists at Washington have been busy cutting expenses for next year, but they have thus far cut only a hundred millions, while unexpected deficits in the Shipping Board alone call for three hundred extra millions.

Not even as rich a government as the government of the United States can go long on a deficit basis of $1,000,000,000 a year.

Nobody has proposed a better plan of tax revision than the sales tax.

It is fair; it is uniform; it is not intricate in calculation or collection.

It will take the brakes off much of the business depression and thus help to solve unemployment.

It will cripple nobody.

It is to YOUR interest that this tax should be tried quickly.

How They Work in Germany

The Labor Cure, Etc.

A short cable dispatch from Berlin will interest 5,000,000 people out of work in the United States. "The town of Possneck in Thuringia does not contain one unemployed person. The big boom in building and in the textile mills occupies everybody." No wonder Northcliffe tells you that England is watching Germany's progress in reconstruction and getting trade.

Some individuals from this country ought to go over and watch for awhile.

Careful experiment proves that occupation, real work of the right, light kind, helps women in convalescence. In experiments with 12,000 women it was proved that "the work cure" helped greatly in bringing them out of illness. It would be a bad thing for fashionable doctors if occupational therapy, which means "cure by work" should spread among prosperous women. Their illnesses, more or less imaginary, that never end, and that could be cured by the washtub, broom or dishcloth in a few weeks, mean prosperity for a great many doctors with soft voice and a nice "bedside manner."

Northcliffe says England's army amounts to 350,000 all told, including British territories in all parts of the world. If England can hold down India, Egypt, Mesopotamia, South Africa and the Lord knows what else besides with 350,000 men, it ought not to take such a gigantic standing army to keep order in this nation of 100,000,000—unless the mass of the people are not to be trusted.

REACHING THE GOAL

It is the natural spirit of the American to shoot straightforward for the position he wishes to reach.

There is bound to be displeasure and disappointment if anyone comes in the way of his realizing his aim and ambition.

But who could expect to make a bee line for a goal and get there without an obstacle?

It is better to get a clear understanding early in the game that every worthy effort has its drawbacks, and you will have yours.

Most all successful careers have attained their success by zig-zagging, not by "shooting."

You may feel that advancement is too slow by this process, but that is where you are wrong.

It is much better to equalize the strain as you go along rather than to pull out taut and break.

Don't worry because your progress is not in a straight line.

If you have worked conscientiously and with all your thoughtful power, studying deeply, you have found that each zig-zag found you a little higher each time.

Presumption

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

WHENEVER I am prone to doubt or wonder—
I check myself, and say, "That Mighty One
Who made the solar system cannot blunder—
And for the best all things are being done."
Who sets the stars on their eternal courses
Has fashioned this strange earth on some sure plan.
Bow low, bow low to those majestic forces
Nor dare to doubt their wisdom—puny man.

You cannot put one little star in motion,
You cannot shape one single forest leaf.
Nor fling a mountain up, nor sink an ocean,
Presumptuous pigmy, large with unbelief.
You cannot bring one dawn of regal splendor
Nor bid the day to shadowy twilight fall,
Nor send the pale moon forth with radiance tender,
And dare you doubt the One who has done all?

"So much is wrong, there is such pain—such sinning."
Yet look again—behold how much is right!
And He who formed the world from its beginning
Knows how to guide it upward to the light.
Your task, Oh man, is not to carp and cavil
At God's achievements, but with purpose strong
To cling to good, and turn away from evil—
That is the way to help the world along.

Results to Date of Prohibition

"What Has Prohibition Actually Accomplished to Date?" asked William Randolph Hearst editorially in the Boston American of July 2. One hundred dollars will be paid for the best answer of not more than 150 words.

Lowers Self-Respect

Editor Boston American:

A curtailment of open sociability, and produced evasive drinking, thereby lowering the individual's self-respect. Created a disrespect of law in otherwise law-abiding citizens. Caused a loss of revenue, plus an added expense to enforce; reflected in additional taxes at an inopportune time.

Stopped the real solution of the liquor problem by education, and retarded the cause of temperance. Turned the moderate drinker of beer and light wines into a consumer of higher proof liquors; easier to procure and more injurious to the system. Transferred the traffic in liquor from the legalized bar to the home and to the detriment of coming generations. Aggravated and lowered the condition of the hard drinker, as evident by court and hospital reports.

Strengthened the belief that laws are enacted for the benefit of the wealthy, enabling them to lay in large stocks previous to prohibition, which to the poor man was impossible

Smiles

THIS IS NO PIPE DREAM

It is only before she becomes his wife that she likes the smell of his pipe.

A QUARTER DOESN'T GO FAR THERE

Money is so cheap in Poland that little Willie has to trundle the price on a wheelbarrow when he is sent to the corner grocery for a bottle of milk.

IT ALWAYS COSTS HIM A STROKE

Nothing is more disconcerting to a middle-aged golfer than to be asked by the young lady who is watching him drive off whether he intends to enter the grandfather's tournament.

STRIVE TO BE CAPTAIN OF YOUR SOUL

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

WHISTLE, if need be, to keep up your courage. But, by all means, keep up your courage!

No, not by all means. There are some means which your self-respect should prevent. For instance, such false means to momentary courage as prohibition is presumed to have made rather inaccessible.

The law of the land denies us "dope" as ready-made means of temporary bravery. Even these are preferable—though not herewith commended—to such moral anaesthetics and spiritual drugs as dull one's brain, with dangerous approach to idiocy.

It does not fit a self-respecting American to seem to be a walking advertisement for some food that enables you to wear the smile that won't come off. Smile if you can, even though your heart may be at the breaking point. But let it be the smile of courage, and not of imbecility.

Not Too Easy

Life, for man, has probably never been too easy, since first he began to be aware of growing pains. It may, indeed, be true that these are the most trying times that the human race has known. Certainly we feel exceedingly the stress and pressure of the mere living today.

Probably, we are more given to self-pity than any previous generation of men. Partly, because life has become too complex for most of us to live it masterfully; and, partly, because we are so much more awake and aware of our possibilities than men have ever been.

At any rate, a nameless sadness seems to possess us, almost as though it hurt us to face and to contemplate the serious aspects of life. Therefore, the less courageous are ready to drug themselves with jag and jazz and even with metaphysical pain-killers.

Two poems come to mind in connection with this theme: One, the familiar lines of William Ernest Henley's "Invictus"; the other, the less familiar verses of Ella Wheeler Wilcox's "Thy Ship."

Each is a tonic appeal to the discouraged or uncertain spirit. When Henley wrote his poem, he was desperately sick, his hospital cot apparently set at death's door. And, yet, he thanked whatever gods may be for his unconquerable soul!

His courage is impressive, if not shiningly beautiful. In the fell clutch of circumstance, he does not wince nor cry aloud. Under the bludgeonings of chance, his head is bloody, but unbowed.

There, at least, is the invincible fighting spirit: a bit defiant, perhaps, in its bravado, but splendid in its final assertion of self-confidence, when he declares himself the master of his fate and the captain of his soul!

More sweetly and with finer human appeal, as was natural to her poised, serene and healthful spirit, Ella Wheeler Wilcox calls on each of us to save our drifting ship. Take the wheel, says she, and steer to knowledge, glory and success.

Guidance of Master

Like every loving teacher, she points to the revelation and guidance of the masters—great mariners, she calls them—who have made the pathway plain for us to follow.

And her spiritual recipe is simple: hold thou to the course of Concentration Channel, and all things shall come in answer to thy swerveless wish, as comes the sunlight to the prisoned blade of grass that yearns all Winter for the kiss of Spring.

Surely it is not necessary to take to drink, physical or spiritual, in order to face even the hardest facts of life courageously!

It is not necessary to take drugs, material or mental, in order to live, however difficult a life, bravely and beautifully!

It needs only such self-respect as will reveal the power of each to be captain of his soul, and such use of that power as will keep our ship in Concentration Channel.

Cheer up, and steer straight and with confidence your craft, laden with the priceless riches of Life!

Salt and the Sea

The sea is gradually getting more and more salty.

Sea vapor is not salty, the salt being left behind in the process of evaporation.

The salt in the sea comes from the land, being brought down by the rivers which gather the salts from the earth.

If all the sea dried up, it has been estimated that the salt deposit left would form a covering one mile thick over a million square miles.

The sea has a great effect on temperature; in hot climates it reduces the heat and in cold climates mitigates the cold

INDUSTRY IN GERMANY RELIES ON EXPORTS

By Joseph Irwin France,
United States Senator from Maryland.

(Copyright, 1921, by the Baltimore Sun.)

Senator France entered Russia on June 30 and is now in Moscow. From England, via Antwerp, he passed through Belgium and Holland, through Essen into Germany, and from Berlin have now arrived by mail several articles dealing with German-Russian relations and the conditions which affect American trade. Senator France is the first American to gain entrance into Russia in many months. The fourth of his articles from Berlin follows. He will write his story of Russian conditions when he gets out.

BERLIN, June 24 (By Mail).—I wished while here, in addition to talking with industrial and financial leaders, to see one of the typical manufacturing establishments so long great factors in world trade, even though the time is hardly present for a detailed comparison of their methods with those of American competitors. The expression of the wish was enough; this morning a car called for me, and, after traversing the western section of the city, I found myself entering what is in reality a community sufficient unto itself.

About the great factories and warehouses of one of the largest electrical machinery houses in the world—it employs 30,000 people, supporting, that is, about 80,000—lie the well-kept homes of the employes, their several churches and schools and trim parks and playgrounds, with the usual massing together of stores and professional offices such as you would see in any city of this magnitude.

Many Employes Women

In previous tours I had seen plenty of common labor, but in this establishment I saw employes of extremely high character and intelligence, and it was a treat to observe the fidelity and pains with which men and women alike applied themselves closely to the smallest task set for them. Many were women; probably three-fourths of those in the second shop, where the lighter equipment was being made—a proportion which has increased considerably as a result of the war.

The point of interest for me, as applying to America, was whether establishments of such great capacity could continue to operate on the present scale and advance to an even larger rate of production, for on their ability to do so depends Germany's ability not only to fulfill her own external obligations but to enjoy the purchasing power which will let her buy from us the goods we have to sell her. On this I talked at some length with the active head of the great enterprise—one of that rare type of scientist-business man combined, so seldom encountered outside Germany. I found him well informed and eagerly interested in political questions as well, as today an industrial leader must be.

Up to now, he explained, it had been possible to operate at a fair percentage of capacity, but the future he found far from certain. The reason is clear, for a company turning out goods on such a huge scale, particularly goods of this character, must look to the export trade for a great part of its market. The home market does not contain enough consumers.

Russian Market

He expressed himself as convinced that Germany's ability to make the reparations payments and thereafter become able to buy and sell in the world markets must depend largely on whether the Russian market can be opened.

He employed the terms of his own industry, but the idea was identical with that presented by the cotton factor of whom I wrote a few days ago and by men from other industries. Russia, he pointed out, has large quantities of raw materials still largely in the hands of the original producers. They will be visible and available the moment methods are found for laying before the peasant-producer the foreign-made goods which he happens to wish in exchange. You come straight back to the thesis that before the world can lurch back on its feet its weak spot, Russia, must be cured by restoring trade circulation.

This man, making electrical goods, was naturally interested in copper. It may be remembered that Germany used to be a very large consumer of American copper; our copper interests, with hoards of metal they can't sell and hordes of miners they can't find work for, may be interested to know that this man, unable to buy from America because we are still "at war" with Germany, has already taken his initial shipment from Russia.

Everywhere I find evidence of the relation between our industrial stagnation and the ridiculous situation which prevents our whole-hearted trading with Germany and Russia.
